Chiang Kai-shek And History

Once again Chiang Kai-shek is in the headlines. He has a sense of drama and of history. He will do something to keep his name there for a while. But he will do nothing to endanger his Formosan stronghold. Those who expect him to recapture China within a few weeks will have to wait. He is a realist, a pragmatist. I have talked with him once, in a four-man interview in Chungking. He was placid, his face almost mask-like, broken only by an occasional smile, which briefly warmed his face. It was, to tell the truth, not much of an interview. It was full of hope—Japan was then in stubborn retreat and the Nazi tide was ebbing. The interview was mostly optimism and platitudes. He saw, as we all did, victory. Not one of us, sitting there that day in his house on a pine-covered slope above the sprawling town on the precipitous hills where the Yangtze and Kialing rivers meet, even entertained an idea he would not go on to rule China.

And, Yet

Yet, it happened. And only the Truman decision to intervene in Korea saved Formosa. Chinese invasion plans were ready, waiting only the anticipated quick North Korean Communist success. History—as so diverse minds as Harry S. Truman, Douglas MacArthur, and Dwight D. Eisenhower all agree—will write that meeting of Communist aggression in that fateful peninsula was "a light lit in the Asian darkness."

China was, and is, a product of the Chinese Revolution. It is a much older revolution than that of Russia's. Sun Yat Sen organized China's after Japan's conquest of her in 1894. For more than a half century she has been in the throes of this continuing struggle.

Chiang was one of Dr. Sun's favorites, and a rising young officer. In 1917 he resigned and went into business. By 1921 he was back, his star rising.

In 1923—after all the Western nations, satisfied with their treaty port rights—had refused Dr. Sun's request aid to fight his revolution, Russia offered help. (Let all those who think we are aiding other nations too much, consider what might have happened had we "helped" Dr. Sun.)

Dr. Sun sent Chiang to Moscow. In his official biography Chiang noted down a bit of advice given him in Moscow by Leon Trotsky—"Patience and activity are the two essential factors for a revolutionary party, and one complements the other." When Dr. Sun died in 1925 Chiang assumed office as head of the Kuomintang army. In 1926 he turned suddenly on the Russian leadership and in a series of great successes won control of China.

But, paradoxically, from that time his fortunes turned slowly, and with interruptions, downhill—to Formosa.

Decision

Being a pragmatist, he would like, as some of our congressmen fear he may, to bring us into all-out war. Only defeat of China and Russia will restore him in command of his homeland. But world war is not yet his decision.

He is a mysterious man, much-loved, much-hated, much-feared. There is no doubt whatever but that he lost the people of China. Vinegar Joe Stilwell despised him. Gen. Douglas MacArthur liked him. And so it went. Tit for tat. A new book just out, "The Third Force in China," is by Carsun Chang, a strong anti-Communist, who drafted the constitution of the Nationalist Chinese government. He insists the Formosa government must be supported by the free nations, but that Chiang himself will not do and "must go." If he does, author Chang believes China can be won.

There is no middle ground where Chiang Kai-shek is concerned. He cannot now, of course, invade China. To do so would require almost as much material and support as was used against the Germans on D-Day. But, he can harass and pin down Chinese... so long as our fleet protects him.

Chiang and history are about to turn another page.

Gales Aim New Terror At Flood-Swept Europe

AMSTERDAM, Feb. 4.—Fresh gales in the North Sea loosed new terror tonight along flood-ravaged coasts in England, Belgium and Holland. High winds, high tide and rain threatened to expand the havoc wrought by week end storms which claimed nearly 2,000 lives.

Amid winds up to 50 miles an hour, a driving rain broke over the devastated area of Holland—hardest hit of the three kingdoms. Gale warnings went out to all Britain's east coast. Thousands of families whose homes so far had escaped damage were under orders to get set for hurry-up evacuation. Belgian coastal dwellers were warned the night's winds would be violent.

FIGHTING CHALLENGE

Against the sea's rising challenge, rescue work and reconstruction operations went on. Thousands of men, mud-caked and weary, struggled to finish repairing broken dikes before their hard gains were wrested away. Thousands of others battled to reach storm victims still isolated in the flood zones.

The revised three-nation death list, as compiled from official and reliable unofficial quarters, mounted to 1,829. Holland counted 1,269, England 546, Belgium 14.

Storm highlights from the three nations:

The rising River Ouse tore a 40-yard gap in its banks, threatening 35,000 persons living along a 15-mile stretch from King's Lynn to Downham Market. Convoys of trucks loaded with granite rushed across the countryside from Nottingham in an attempt to fill the breach.

FRESH STORM

Many of the persons living in a low-lying danger zone fled their homes on the heels of government warnings that the fresh storm was heading south, kicking up high seas.

Remington Gets 3-Year Term In Perjury Case

NEW YORK, Feb. 4.—William W. Remington, convicted Jan. 27 of lying when he denied ever passing War Production Board secrets to a Soviet spy ring, was sentenced to three years in prison today on charges of perjury.

"What was black is now white and vice versa," he complained without bitterness. "This conviction is unfair."

The handsome blond former government economist said he withdrew even the pleas of an ailing daughter that he confess wartime Communist spy activities to avoid the perjury indictment. But he added his principles would not let him take this way out.

Federal Judge Vincent L. Leibell continued Remington in $7,000 bail so he can appeal the latest prison sentence. Two years ago Remington upset a five-year prison sentence on appeal.

"Sometimes liberals may go too far to the left," Judge Leibell told him in sentencing remarks that carried an undertone of sympathy for Remington's bleak outlook at the age of 35.

Fish or Cut Bait, Dulles Tells Europe

By RAYMOND DANIELL
New York Times News Service
Special to The Atlanta Constitution

LONDON, Feb. 4.—The cherished American ideal of helping to build a unified Europe, capable of defending itself, moved a little nearer realization tonight.

This was due largely to the persuasive arguments that have been advanced in the last few days by Secretary of State Dulles and Mutual Security Administrator Stassen, working as a team of policy-makers and paymasters.

Dulles has been advancing the idea that Europe's only salvation lies in unification. Stassen has been saying that the only hope of continued American help is for Europe to show some sign of carrying out its own commitments.

BECOMING IMPATIENT

Together they have created the impression, both in France and here, that the American people and Congress are becoming rather impatient.

This is not to say that they have completely overcome French suspicions or British hesitations. They have made some progress in both directions.

The British are no more inclined toward full membership in any European community effort than they ever were, but it may be that they are willing to go a little bit further than they were before Dulles' visit toward meeting the French conditions of joining in an alliance with the Germans.

According to foreign diplomats, the line that Dulles has taken everywhere in Europe is that the United States Congress has reached the limit of its patience and wants action.

TIME HAS COME
He has pointed out that it is nearly nine months since the European Defense Community treaties were signed but that nothing has been done about putting them into effect. The time has come, he is telling European statesmen, either to fish or cut bait. Unless there is action on the part of European legislators, or a definite promise of it within 75 days, he will find it very difficult to convince the Congress.

DEATH ON ATLANTA STREETS Principal Danger Spot At Broad and Marietta

By KEELER McCARTNEY

Impatient drivers who switch suddenly from one traffic lane to another and attempt turns with a total disregard for the simplest of driving regulations have turned the intersection at Broad and Marietta Sts., N. W., into the number one danger spot in Atlanta.

This central downtown intersection led all others during the last 12 months in accident frequency and personal injuries, police records show. Twelve persons were injured there in 44 accidents in which property damage alone reached $13,200.

The second most dangerous intersection is Boulevard and Memorial Dr., S. E., with 39 accidents in 12 months; the third, Ponce de Leon and Piedmont Avenues, 38 accidents; fourth, Spring and Marietta Sts.,

Teacher Pay Plan Stalled By Group

Gowen Advances
Raise Proposal
By M. L. ST. JOHN

The House appropriations committee rejected by the narrow margin of 13 to 10 Wednesday a plan by Rep. Charlie Gowen of Glynn County to include a teachers' pay raise in the contingent budget by trimming $6,775,000 from Governor Talbott's recommendations for other items.

Sixteen members of the committee who were present failed to vote.

FIGHT ASSURED

The closeness of the vote assured a floor fight when the entire membership of the House takes up the appropriations bill Tuesday morning as a "committee-of-the-whole." After considering the bill, item-by-item, as a committee, the full House then will vote on the perfected bill.

In answer to an invitation by Chairman Herschel Lovett of Laurens several days ago for anyone in the state to "show us how money can be raised for a 10 per cent teachers' raise,"

Gowen appeared before the committee Wednesday and outlined in detail how he thought $6,775,000 could be slashed from the contingent section recommendations. Then he asked that this amount be used in the contingent section to grant an over-all cost-of-living pay raise for teachers.

ASKS FUND USE

Gowen suggested using $2,500,000 of the money proposed for school buildings in the contingent section for increasing teachers' salaries. He quoted Speaker Fred Hand and State Auditor B. E. Thrasher Jr., as stating the State School Building Authority program could get along for the next few years on the money provided in the regular section of the budget for this purpose.

Gowen also asked that the regents increase university professors' salaries out of a $3,000,000 fund now proposed in the contingent section for university buildings.

Gowen proposed that a $1,000,000

Juvenile Bill Criticized by Authorities

By CELESTINE SIBLEY

A bill which its critics said would "set juvenile court procedure in Georgia back 55 years" and provide for handling children "as if they were criminals" Wednesday drew cries of alarm from juvenile court authorities in Fulton County.

The court bill, House Bill 347, would amend the juvenile court act of 1951 to provide for a prosecutor for juvenile cases and a 12-member jury if parents or guardians request. It would also provide that in case of appeal from the actions of the juvenile judge the status quo would prevail.

It was introduced by Rep. Emory L. Rowland of Johnson County a week ago and had languished in committee, apparently unnoticed, until juvenile court authorities and some members of the House discovered it and became fearful that it would pass.

In rapid order they secured a promise from Representative Rowland that he would confer with Judge W. W. Woolfolk of Fulton County before pressing for passage of the bill.

Fulton's Judge Woolfolk declared the status quo provision of the bill "would simply mean that while an appeal was pending any child found in a situation endangering his health, morals character or general welfare would be returned to that situation until the case was settled. The juvenile court couldn't execute an order against gross neglect or starvation until the appellate court acted."

Under the present law, the child remains in custody of the court while appeals are pending.

Senate Nods To Talbott On AF Post

By WILMOT HERCHER

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—The Senate confirmed Harold E. Talbott as secretary of the Air Force today, completing the civilian high command in the Defense Department.

Senators Kefauver (D-Tenn.) and Morse (Ind-Ore) spoke against Talbott's appointment on the Senate floor, but when the roll was called the vote was 76 to 6.

TO SELL HOLDINGS

Talbott, a 64-year-old New York industrialist, agreed to dispose of substantial holdings in Chrysler Motors, Electric Auto-Lite and other corporations to qualify for one of the five big jobs at the Pentagon.

His appointment was approved 14-1 by the Senate Armed Services Committee last Thursday, but Kefauver asked that the hearings be re-opened to question Talbott about a World War I investigation of his aircraft manufacturing company and about the alleged high cost of auto parts the government has been buying from some of the firms in which Talbott is interested.

KEFAUVER CHARGE

During the confirmation debate Kefauver said he was not satisfied with Talbott's attitude regarding evidence that an Army procurement officer gave his firm secret and valuable tips on aircraft contracts during the first World War.

At a hearing Monday Talbott would not say the practices were wrong, but he testified that "as secretary of the Air Force I would not let anything like that happen again."

Supporting Kefauver, Morse said "large segments of the population" would view Talbott's confirmation with "suspicion and distrust."

Senators Gore (D-Tenn.), Fullbright (D-Ark.), Murray (D-Mont.) and Kilgore (D-W.Va.) joined Kefauver and Morse in voting against the new Air Force chief.

ROK Division Added to Front, 2 More Ready

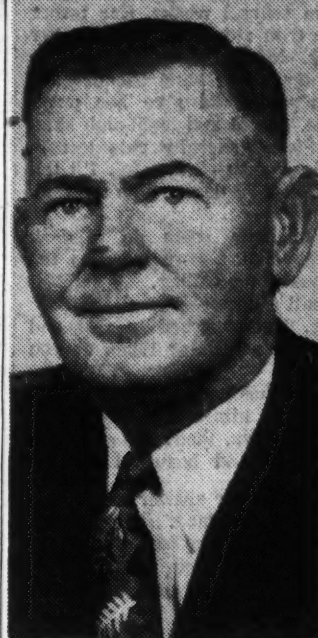

TOKYO, Feb. 5.—Gen. James A. Van Fleet, outgoing Eighth Army commander, announced Wednesday that a new South Korean division is fighting on the eastern front of Korea and that enough trained ROK troops are available for two more divisions.

The raid, closely patterned after the controversial "Operation Smack," inflicted 1,200 casualties on the enemy, including 400 dead, the Eighth Army reported.

Pilcher Wins Cox's Seat In Congress

ALBANY, Feb. 4.—Election of J. L. Pilcher of Meigs as Representative from the Second Congressional District was conceded tonight by his principal rivals in today's special election held to fill the vacancy caused by the death of E. E. Cox.

Last night H. Grady Rawls, Albany, and H. L. Wingate Jr., of Pelham, conceded the nomination in telephone calls to the Albany Herald, which had supported Rawls.

At the time, Rawls was about 1,000 behind Pilcher and Wingate somewhat farther back. Four other candidates were hopelessly outdistanced.

Unofficial returns from 108 of the district's 136 precincts, representing all of the 14 counties, gave Pilcher 10,669 votes, Rawls 9,572 and Wingate 5,740. Only a plurality was needed to win.

At this stage of the count, half of the counties were complete. Of the other seven, Pilcher led in four, Rawls in two and Wingate one.

Pilcher carried his own populous county of Thomas, and the smaller counties of Calhoun and Decatur. His strength in the latter came as a surprise to backers of Rawls, who had expected their candidate to take it.

Rawls wound up ahead in Miller County, where he was born; Seminole, where he once lived, and heavily populated Dougherty, his present home.

Wingate was ahead in his own county of Mitchell, although hard pressed by Pilcher. He took the big farming county of Tift by a safe margin over Pilcher.

Quick Death Expected for Most Curbs

By WILLARD H. MOBLEY

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—The Eisenhower administration put the main industrial control agency out of business as a separate unit today and was reported pushing a series of sweeping orders to decontrol the bulk of consumer goods prices. Those orders are due to start this week.

The functions of the abolished Defense Production Administration were ordered transferred to the Office of Defense Mobilization, but the consolidation move obviously was a plan to end controls on materials and products except for highly essential defense items.

TARGET DATE

The two moves together round out the series of free economy steps already begun with dismissal notices to employees of the boards that have controlled wages and salaries.

Shortly before the White House announcement of the DPA move a top price official told a reporter two big orders in his field were in preparation, with Friday as the target date for the first one.

He said the intention is to decontrol all meat at that time, along with a list of other consumer items including canned fish and canned meat, children's and infants' clothing at retail, furniture at all levels of distribution, small electrical appliances, housewares, notions, phonograph records, venetian blinds, awnings and some other items.

With shoes, and men's and women's clothing already out from under controls, that order would just about end price ceilings on apparel items.

FREEING MEAT

The official said the plan is to follow up, in two weeks or less if possible, with a second order decontrolling major appliances, such as stoves, refrigerators and washing machines.

Joseph Frehill, price administrator, confirmed part of the official's report, saying in a statement that there will be a decontrol order this week, including meat. He said it was part of the program for "orderly decontrol."

The meat order, an official said, will apply on beef across the board—from the stockyard to the butcher's block. In theory there is still a limit now on what packers

CAINE MUTINY

Willie Makes Decision To Wind Up Romance

By HERMAN WOUK
CHAPTER XXIII

In the Sonophone Studios Willie found May standing at the microphone, talking to two men in shirt sleeves. The studio was a bare room cluttered with cables and recording machines. Willie halted uncertainly inside the door. "He's here, May!" Marty Rubin called. She turned, ran to Willie, put an arm around his neck, and kissed him on the cheek.

"I want a drink," May said, when they were alone at a table in the deserted upstairs room of Lindy's, "and then I want some breakfast."

"You're keeping queer hours—What's that?" he said as May popped a white pill into her mouth.

"Aspirin. Feel my forehead." Her skin was hot. Willie looked at her with concern. She was haggard, her hair was carelessly pinned up on her head, and there were blue shadows under her eyes. She grinned sadly and a little defiantly.

"You ought to be in bed, May."

"Bed is for those who can afford it—Well, tell me all about the war."

Instead Willie questioned her about herself. She was singing at a 52d Street club, her first job in several weeks. Her father had been ill for half a year, and the fruit store, managed by her mother alone, was earning nothing. May was supporting the family. She had taken a room in a downtown hotel because she feared the long subway rides at night would give her pneumonia. "I'm kind of run down, Willie. School and night-club singing don't mix too well, after all. Sleep generally gets lost in the shuffle. I pass out on subways, in classes—it's awful. I'll tell you what. Let's go up to my room. I can lie down while we talk. I still have to sing tonight."

Her apartment was a wretched little room on a dark areaway. The bedcover, the rug, the chairs were worn to the gray threads, and paint hung in patches on the ceiling.

"You get into bed. I'm going to call a doctor."

"Now, dear, I've seen a doctor. I'm supposed to rest and take aspirin. The question is, what's the schedule? When do you have to go home to your mother?"

"The night is ours," Willie said.

"Oh? That's wonderful." She came to him and put her arms around his neck. "Is it all right if I lie down, then? We can have a nice old chat—and I'll be all bright and beautiful for the evening."

"Of course."

"Darling," Willie said, sitting and taking her cold hand.

"I'm sorry I came at such a bad time—sorry I didn't let you know—"

"Willie, you're not half as sorry as I am. Only it's done, and there's no help for it."

"Why didn't you let me know you were in trouble? I have money—"

A look of fear came over

May's face. She pressed his palm. "Willie, I'm no charity case—maybe I'm overplaying

the scene, trying to cover up for looking so ratty. I'm in fine shape financially and every other way—I just have a lousy cold, see—haven't you ever had a cold?" She began to cry, pressing his hand against her eyes. Warm drops trickled down on his finger. He held her close, and kissed her hair. "Maybe

I'd better sleep. I am really shot," she said, in a low dry voice, her eyes hidden against his hand, "if I stoop to turning on the tears. Why don't you go out and catch a movie? I could sit around in this mousehole, listening to me

snore—"

"I'll stay here," He kissed her.

She said, "This is wrong.

You'll catch God knows what plagues."

"Go to sleep."

WILLIE DECIDES

"Some home-coming. A wee py, drunken, jabbering

sweetheart, passing out on you in a roach trap—" May slid down into the bed, and closed her eyes, murmuring, "I have amazing powers of recupera-tion. Wake me at seven-thirty."

He was quite fixed now in his decision to break with May.

Seeing her again had confirmed

it. He was certain it was right.

His ambition went no further than the life of a gentleman-

professor at a gentlemanly university. He wanted a wife, in the dim future, of his own kind, smooth, sweet, pretty, and educated, with all the small graces of good background and a moneyed family. May Winn was brilliant, yes, unbecomingly attractive, maybe, though not at this moment. She was also vulgar, brassy, and overperfumed

in the show-business way, and she had allowed him all sorts of liberties from the first.

"Am I seeing things?" said

Willie, when the cab pulled up in front of the Grotto Club.

"Where's the Tahiti? Where's

the Yellow Door? Isn't this where—"

"This place used to be the

Yellow Door," said May. "The Tahiti is gone. That Chinese restaurant used to be the Tahiti. Nothing lasts on this godforsaken street."

She had been subdued and listless through dinner; and list-lessly she waved at Willie as she vanished from his sight

through the dressing-room curtain. He was amazed when she came out to sing half an hour later. She was fresh-faced and radiant. The customers, crowded in the smoky cellar between narrow walls of papermaché rocks interspersed with tanks of gloomy gray fish, listened in silence, and applauded loudly after each number.

BREAK-UP LOOMS

Willie sat on the little hard seat for five hours, talking to

May or listening to her sing.

When they came into her equid room back at the hotel,

it was a quarter to three. Willie was suppressing yawns, and his eyes smarted. Without a word they took off their coats, lay on the bed, and kissed hungrily and wildly for a few minutes.

"Willie, we're all washed up, aren't we?"

It is the worst question in the world. Willie didn't have to UNPLEASANT PHEASANT—WEYMOUTH, Mass., Feb. 4—Milkman Jack Crawford wards off attack from a pheasant that rushed out of nearby woods and tried to peck him. phone. He called the Woodley. "May? How are you? It's Willie."

"Hello, dear! I'd given you up."

"I'm going back tomorrow morning. I'd like to talk to you."

"I'm working tonight, Willie."

"May I come to the club around midnight?"

"All right."

"Mother," Willie said later as they came out of the lobby of the opera house to the slushy street, "do you mind if I go on the town by myself for a while? I'll see you back home."

Her face showed how well

she understood, and how worried she was. "Willie... our last night?"

"I won't be late, Mother."

He felt able to stuff her bodily into a taxicab if she argued.

She must have known, because she signaled for a cab herself.

"Have a wonderful time,

dear."

NATURAL IMPULSE

May was singing when he came into the crowded Grotto.

When she had finished her number they went to her dressing room, and Willie said, "I didn't tell you about something last time. I want to know what you think." He described the mutiny and the investigation to her in long detail. It felt like confessing; his spirit brightened as he talked. May listened calmly. "What do you want me to say, Willie?" she said when he had finished.

"I don't know, May. What do you think of it? What shall I do? What's going to happen?"

She heaved a long sigh. "Is that what you came tonight? To tell me about that?"

"I wanted you to know about it."

"Willie, I don't know much about the Navy. But it doesn't seem to me you have to do anything. The Navy is a pretty smart outfit. They won't condemn any of you for trying to save your ship. At worst, you made a well-meaning mistake of judgment. That isn't a crime."

"It was mutiny, May..."

"Oh, hell, Willie, dear, you couldn't mutiny—not even against your mother, let alone

your ship's captain..."

"When are you leaving?"

"Seven o'clock in the morning."

May rose, and slipped the bolts on her door. "Noisier musicians in the world work here."

DeKalb Rally To Whet Commission Bill Fight

A public hearing Thursday on pending legislation to modify DeKalb County's one-commissioner form of government Wednesday promised to be a stormy one as two civic bodies announced opposition to the bill introduced by DeKalb legislators.

The hearing, called by the legislators, will be held at 2 p. m. Thursday at the DeKalb Building.

The DeKalb League of Women Voters, in a letter addressed to DeKalb's three-man delegation, urged that the bill be dropped this session, charging that the merits of the measure are outweighed by "the violation of key sound principles, and by the need for further study of DeKalb government in view of prospective rapid growth" in the area.

LETTER NOT RECEIVED

Two of the three legislators said late Wednesday, however, they had not received the letter. Rep. W. Hugh McWhorter said the DeKalb representatives "just got the bill ready and introduced" recently and had not had time to present their side of the controversy. He said he would not comment further until after the hearing.

MEASURE DEFENDED

The legislators and Commissioner Scott Candler had defended the measure, which sets up a board of five commissioners, one elected by the people and four appointed by the grand jury.

The bill also names Candler as the one elected commissioner for a two-year period following the expiration of his term in 1964.

The four appointed commissioners would have authority only in certain fiscal matters and the one elected commissioner would have virtually the same authority as DeKalb's single commissioner now has.

Candler, who has called the bill a "good compromise" between a one-man and a five-man commission form of government, said he will not be at the hearing.

Rep. Guy Rutland Jr. also reported he hadn't gotten a copy of the league letter. A. Mel Turner, the other DeKalb representative, could not be reached for comment.

The League of Women Voters earlier this week called on all civic clubs in the county to have representation at the hearing and express their opinions on the bill.

H. H. Hutchins of Lithonia, president of the DeKalb Good Government League, Inc., said he will speak against the bill at the hearing. He said his group favors a change from the present one-commissioner form to an elected three-man commission.

personnel files in 1949 but a key to the file room for work there, alone if he wanted, at night.

Service's dismissal resulted

'Trim the Fat' Is Good Policy

In acting swiftly to initiate trimming of the top-heavy federal bureaucracy, President Eisenhower has begun the first steps toward a balanced budget. In restricting government building projects until his administration can take a closer look at spending and revenues, he takes another step toward the heart of the problem.

There is no doubt that tremendous economies can be effected in government through eliminating needless bureaus and employees. This is no reflection on the host of loyal and efficient government workers, but on human nature itself. Department heads, anxious to make themselves secure and their agencies assume greater importance, are famous for padding their requests. They never cut. They only add to.

Repeatedly, we have called for a program of economy in Washington, for eliminating waste and duplication, and for slowing down appropriations for pork-barrel projects during the defense emergency. We know that the Democrats, long in power, were reluctant to take the political risks that such a program entailed. Senators, representatives and the President alike protected pet projects. This was a natural reaction. The fact that the Eisenhower administration can start off with a new slate is one of its greatest virtues.

In that connection, too, it is desirable that the Executive department begin with its own house. Although many of the Hoover Commission recommendations have been carried through, there are many more still pending. The Congress is acting wisely in giving the President full authority to go ahead with streamlining all executive agencies. The savings should be tremendous.

If the President needs an additional blueprint on how to cut government costs, Sen. Paul H. Douglas, Illinois Democrat, has already provided it. His exhaustive studies during the past few years revealed some amazing things. His frequent tirades on the floor of the Senate about government waste and extravagance are well known. In a recent book, "Economy in the National Government," he detailed these recommendations, which he said would save $7,500,000,000 annually without injuring essential services.

Some of his recommendations are already being carried out. For instance, the military has trimmed the fat from its divisions by eliminating thousands of useless jobs. "The military authorities are probably the greatest wasters of manpower and materials in the country," the senator said, in pointing out how $4,000,000,000 could be saved every year without danger to the services.

His description of the State department would fit almost any other agency in Washington. Of this, he said: "The State department has a touching faith that the more men and women it hires, the more readily problems can be solved. A much smaller staff would not be so administratively muscle-bound."

At any rate, we are glad to see President Eisenhower moving in on fat and waste. The job needs to be done. The President will have the full cooperation of the American people in his task. Under present economic conditions, few terminated government employees need worry about finding a job. There are plenty available in private industry.

Give Blabbermouths Deserved Attention

The Eisenhower administration is reported to be shaping up a new security system designed to fire drunks, "blabbermouths," and the like out of the government along with the disloyal. The objective deserves a long round of applause.

In addition to subversives, we have long had a particular aversion to "blabbermouths"—the government employees who for reasons of their own, often political, set out deliberately to wreck a program or policy. It's not only the careless, but the ambitious, who indulge. It causes confusion, waste and loss of direction.

In our list of "blabbermouths" we include those who pop off in print against the policies they are charged with carrying out. This applies in particular to generals and admirals, who continually spout off in public to influence opinion against policies of the government to which they are pledged to serve. We might be so bold as to include in our list of champion "blabbermouths" the names of General Mac-

Arthur, General Van Fleet and others who have forgotten at times who takes and who gives the orders.

Flu Epidemic Cuts Off the Blood Flow

Old Man Flu can be a very mean customer. He disrupts the home and the office; he can play havoc with the schoolroom and the shop.

Right now he is wrecking the Red Cross blood program in Georgia. Flu epidemics this week have caused the cancellation of Bloodmobile visits to three Georgia cities.

The Red Cross people were counting on that blood. They were counting on it for shipment to Korea, for civilian needs here at home.

The Red Cross can't help it about the flu. Neither can you. But if you are hale and hearty and unscathed by the "bug," then you can go out to the Blood Center as a volunteer donor. You can go in the place of that fellow who had to cancel his appointment because the flu caught up with him.

He'd do the same for you some time. You never know when you might need him.

Let the Law State Date of Primary

We applaud the Georgia Senate for its vote approving the second Wednesday in September as the legal date for the state primary. We trust the House will concur.

There is no valid reason for a "floating" primary, the date arranged at the convenience of a committee or of candidates. As Sen. Everett Millican says, a voter has a right to know from year to year just when the balloting will be.

Fixing the date by law is advisable. So is the choice of September as primary month, thus to cut down on the time between nomination and official election, election and taking of office. Little good ever has come of "lame duck" administrations. They should be kept as short as possible.

The West Africans Have Strong Stomachs

Natives of French West Africa have found a simple solution to the problem of how to rid themselves of a voluble and pious public servant who fails to do their bidding. They make steaks of him.

Blaka-Boda, Negro, served French West Africa in Paris as a member of Parliament. Early in 1950, while on a stump-speaking tour of the bush, he vanished. It now looks like he may have been eaten by his constituents.

As accustomed as we are to stump-speakers and as irritated as we often get with members of Congress, the worst we have ever suggested is "hang the bum." However, the West Africans, evidently imbued with the idea that a public servant must serve or be served, chose the latter. Somehow or other we find ourselves engaged in a wee bit of behind-the-scenes applause for their choice. It's comforting to know that others, too, have found there's a limit to human endurance, even in the jungles of Africa.

Waycross Fire Chief Set Fine Example

A fine public servant died last week at Waycross.

He was Harvey C. Thackston, for 40 years a member of the Waycross Fire Department and for 30 years its chief. Under his direction, the fire department gave the south Georgia city one of the lowest per-capita loss records in the nation and won for it numerous national and state fire-prevention awards.

One of Chief Thackston's last official acts was the filing of his annual report in which he cited the Waycross loss rate of 87 cents per capita in contrast to the national average of more than $4 per capita.

But in the next breath he warned that a city cannot prevent fire in 1953 by pointing with pride to past laurels. Conscientious administrator that he was, he knew that plaques and award certificates are important only as they represent property and lives saved.

The city Chief Thackston served, and the state as well, are the poorer by reason of his death. But he has left an example of efficient service as an inspiration to his successor and to others charged with protecting our communities against fire.

Ike Gets Off To a Good Start

WASHINGTON—This administration is certainly getting down to business fast. Orders of far-reaching consequence are being issued without flourish or fanfare. And, what's more, there is actually harmony between President Eisenhower and Senator Taft and between the White House and Congress generally despite the efforts of some hostile factions in the press to exaggerate differences and magnify them into instances of alleged friction. A case in point is the overwhelming vote of the House of Representatives just given to the President's request for a two-year extension of the present powers to reorganize federal bureaus.

There was a conference between the President and top leaders of both houses of Congress last week. The proposal to extend the reorganization powers was mentioned. There was agreement that they should be granted; but one of the leaders said there was a sentiment on Capitol Hill to change the existing law so that, when the President sent in a reorganization plan, it could be vetoed by a simple majority of either house instead of by a constitutional majority as at present. Mr. Eisenhower was dubious but one of the members present said he didn't think the point was material. So the discussion turned to other matters.

Within a few days, Joseph M. Dodge, the new director of the budget, was testifying before a House committee and saying it was important to retain the constitutional majority provision so that any veto would be exercised by an actual majority of the House or Senate. Otherwise, 25 senators or 110 House members could kill a reorganization proposal. It was a surprise to the committee lined up solidly for the weaker form. The same thing happened the next day in the Senate committee.

What actually happened was this: the congressional leaders were quietly advised that, upon further advice from the director of the budget, the powers were deemed very important as a means of cutting expenses and that the President would like to have the same authority that Mr. Truman had, and he felt sure it could be exercised effectively.

Anyway, the leaders of the Republican Party in both houses recognized it as an honest misunderstanding of the President's position and set about to give him what he wanted—the same law that Mr. Truman had.

Senators Reflect Strange Hysteria

WASHINGTON—Perhaps it is old-fashioned to feel uneasy over a current spectacle in the United States Senate.

This was the querulous and quibbling quizzing in secret session by elders of the Senate foreign relations committee of the former head of one of our great universities about views he had expressed, openly and publicly, in a speech and two magazine articles, as is the right and privilege of American citizens.

In the case of Dr. James Bryan Conant, who recently retired as president of Harvard to accept President Eisenhower's appointment as high commissioner of Germany, it is more than a right. It is a duty and responsibility for him to speak up and contribute to our common store of knowledge because of his education, his training, and his experience, both as an educator and as a scientist who has served his country and government well.

To have to defend here that right and responsibility is, itself, evidence of the fever and fret into which we have excited ourselves. Another bit of evidence is that senators, who are reasonable men, alive to our traditions, should feel compelled to summon Dr. Conant into secret session with them and ask him to explain, as if he were a schoolboy or a miscreant, what he meant by this or that sentence or phrase. That reveals, shockingly, the pressures of the hysteria that seems to be tightening its grip on us.

President Eisenhower, who appointed Dr. Conant and who himself was head of a great university also, does not share the senatorial timidity about Joe McCarthy. In fact, he was talking directly to the senator in his message to Congress when he announced flatly that he hereafter was going to handle the loyalty program without any "policing" from Congress. This obviously meant Joe McCarthy's hot and cold-running inquiries.

Some senators might note well something that Dr. Conant said in his final report to Harvard, to which President Eisenhower also certainly would subscribe:

"As to the charge that some professors hold unpopular political opinions, the answer is, of course, they do. It would be a sad day for the United States if the tradition of dissent were driven out of the universities. For it is the freedom to disagree, to quarrel with authority on intellectual matters, to think otherwise, that has made this nation what it is today. Indeed, I would go further and say that our industrial society was pioneered by men who were dissenters, who challenged orthodoxy in some field and challenged it successfully. The global struggle with communism turns on this very point."

Long and distinguished is the list of pioneer dissenters—among them, Robert Fulton, Eli Whitney, Thomas A. Edison, the Wright brothers, Henry Ford and, along with them in the realm of political ideas, all those men who wrote our Constitution, as well as Thomas Jefferson, Andrew Jackson, Abraham Lincoln, Theodore Roosevelt, Woodrow Wilson and Franklin D. Roosevelt.

She Sees No Lack of Capable Men To Serve Georgia in Governorship

Atlanta—We hardly agree with Baldy's cartoon that Tom Linder would have to shoot his way into the Georgia governorship. Mr. Linder has proved that he would make a good state executive. Fred Hand would make a fine governor. Robert Elliott of Columbus would make a fine governor. Roy Harris would also be a good one.

All these men and many other native Georgians have followed Thomas Jefferson's wise injunction that we should keep our government close to the heart and mind of the farmers, so as to stabilize our country. We have a good governor now, who keeps his ear to the ground and his mind on Georgia.

The Peacock Is a Good Weather Indicator, Says He

Atlanta—Katherine Barnwell quotes biologist Robt. B. Platt (Emory) as saying he does not believe animals can prognosticate the weather.

The peacock, with a four-to-five-foot tail, will never roost on top of a house or barn when a storm or beating rain is on the night weather program. He will invariably stay close to the ground, or roost in the thick branches of some tree if one is near.

Ask anyone who has ever raised them. I think he will agree. C. P. TALBOT.

He Says Time From School For Religion 'Impractical'

Miami, Fla.—Dr. J. R. Brokhoff sent a letter to you protesting an editorial in which you branded as "impractical" a proposal made by the Atlanta Christian Council to release city and county school children once a week for religious training. I would like to offer this belated support of your editorial.

It is not necessary to be an expert nor to have a very deep insight of human nature to realize that one or two more hours of religious indoctrination a week cannot have any influence in the formation of an ethical and well-integrated personality. What is more, this time released for religious training is a waste.

Democrats Incensed at Eisenhower Implications About Seventh Fleet

WASHINGTON—Democratic members of Congress have been quick to take exception to the manner used by President Eisenhower in his State of the Union message to explain his order withdrawing the American Seventh Fleet from the waters around the Island of Formosa.

Complaints are being made that he dealt none too fairly with the situation. These Democrats point out that from the wording of the President's explanation anyone might get the impression that the whole purpose of the naval blockade laid down there in June, 1950, was to protect Communist China against any possibility of attack by Chinese Nationalist forces stationed on Formosa. The very reverse of that was true, of course.

The original order sending the Seventh Fleet to neutralize Formosan waters was issued by former President Truman immediately after the Korean outbreak. We were thinking almost entirely about the protection of Formosa. Chiang Kai-shek had been chased out of China by the Reds and with the remnants of his Nationalist forces had taken up a refuge on Formosa. Having just been forced out of China, with his once huge army disintegrated, there was little prospect that he would be able to undertake an invasion soon. And certainly not without our active help.

As a sop to the Chinese Reds, whom we were trying to keep out of the Korean War, the 1950 blockade was made to apply to both Communists and Nationalists under Chiang. We said that neither side should be permitted to attack the other. In that way, the original Seventh Fleet order was intended as an act to neutralize these two conflicting Chinese elements.

But anyone who is in the slightest degree familiar with the events of that time can have no doubt as to the real purpose of the order. It was to protect Chiang and the last foothold of the Nationalists from being overrun by the Communists.

In the light of that bit of history, it is interesting to see how General Eisenhower puts the matter in his announcement to Congress about the withdrawal of the fleet. Speaking of our fleet operation around Formosa, he had this to say:

"This has meant, in effect, that the United States Navy was required to serve as a defensive arm of Communist China... there is no longer any logic or sense in a condition that required the United States Navy to assume defensive responsibilities on behalf of the Chinese Communists, thus permitting those Communists, with greater impunity, to kill our soldiers and those of our United Nations Allies in Korea... I am, therefore, issuing instruction that the Seventh Fleet no longer be employed to shield Communist China..."

Some Democrats are downright incensed at the President's remarks. They can see no justification for them at all. More will probably be heard of the matter in the debates that are to follow.

One of the most charitable criticisms made of this part of the President's State of the Union message was that it was probably written for him by someone with a political twist to it which some Democrats find none too much to their liking. General Ike is being condemned for not making a more straightforward statement of the case.

Past Sins Do Not Void Future Hope

The other day I spent some time talking with a man who felt he was forever condemned by a foolish act he had committed long ago. The matter long weighed upon his conscience. It has brought him restlessness, anxiety, and mental strain. I interpreted to him the Christian gospel of forgiveness and quoted to him the words of Christ.

After we had prayed together, he left. But our interview stayed in my mind and I continued to think of all the things I might have said but didn't think of at that moment. Ministers frequently meet folks with similar burdens. We hear persons say, "But I've got a past" or "I have a bad record behind me." "All of us, I suppose, have had experiences we'd rather not recall. Christianity, however, teaches that through sincere repentance a man's sins, though they be as scarlet, may become as white as snow. Do you take that word in faith? If you do, you won't be a man with a past, but a man with a glorious and hopeful future.

Church tradition has long associated the beloved saint, Mary Magdalene, with the woman taken in adultery (read John 8:3-11). One day in the temple the scribes and Pharisees brought to Jesus this woman whose sin was notorious. By ancient custom, she should be stoned to death. Christ said: "He that is without sin among you, let him first cast a stone at her."

The accusers could not ignore the voice of their conscience and slowly each slunk off into the shadows of the mighty temple pillars. The woman then looked into the kindly eyes of the Master and realized, perhaps for the first time in her life, the meaning of divine love. Christ said to her: "Go, and sin no more."

Well, church tradition says this very woman was indeed Mary Magdalene, who at the dark hour of Calvary stood near the Master's cross even as the disciples in fear hid from the light of day. And she it was to whom Christ first spoke on Easter morning.

I know some New Testament scholars caution us against identifying these two persons together, but this identification is surely consistent with many gospel experiences and with our experience, too. Through Christ many persons who have a past record have become persons with a future hope.

Just think of all those Biblical giants who had a past they would rather not remember. Moses had a past record and so did Jacob and Joseph and David. And what a sinful past the Apostle Paul had! And St. Augustine, too. But through the love of God each was forgiven and each became a man with a bright new future.

They Take Up Space in Class

A course in space travel has been added to the curriculum at Marietta College in the Ohio city by the same name. For the time being, says the instructor in Space I, the objective will be to study "the principles involved in any proposal to propel rockets through regions remote from the earth" rather than to settle the question of whether space travel is possible.

Apparently, the professor has his feet on the ground. But the possibilities in a course like that are interesting. There's no telling just how far you can go. For instance, how about field trips? Or exchange students from Mars? Even an elementary space class presents one novel feature—the collegian gets credit for studying that into which up to now he has been only staring.

Speaking of space, there was the scientist who said he had invented a rocket with a camera attached which shot 3,000 miles up into the stratosphere, took a picture of the whole world and then landed safely with the film. "How did the picture turn out?" he was asked. "Not so good," said the scientist. "Somebody moved."

FAME IS FLEETING indeed, especially in the turnip patch. One day, on the basis of an 8-lb. specimen, I claim the Georgia turnip-growing championship for the Robert Wilsons of Taylor County. In the next day's mail there comes evidence to wrest the turnip title from the Taylor Countians quicker than you can say rutabaga.

First, June Moseley of Douglas testifies that J. F. Hester of Rt. 2, Douglas, carried into The Coffee County Progress office a turnip which weighed 8½ pounds. The Progress editor, Melvin Curtis Waters, held the scales. The count was no doubt accurate. Melvin is a bachelor and hence not given to exaggerations about weights in the 7-to-10-pound range.

By half a pound, the Coffee County entry goes to the head of the turnip class, but not for long.

The next testimony is from A. G. Garbutt, Jesup lumberman who knows his vegetables. He introduces as Exhibit A an item from The Jesup Sentinel that in a patch on Little Satilla Creek, Jack Stephens of Odum raised a turnip that weighed 9 lbs., 2 oz. Jack took it to the Sentinel staff, telling them he pulled up this little one so the really big ones would have a chance to spread out and grow.

So to Odum's Jack Stephens goes the 1953 heavyweight turnip belt.

Next? The title having passed, will someone please pass the turnips?

THE OBVIOUS: It doesn't take a seventh son of a seventh son to see that taking the Seventh Fleet out of the Formosan Straits gives Chiang a Chinaman's chance.

IT'S A FACT: There are 76 pounds of glass in the modern automobile.

5 Pct. Drop in U.S. Farm Income in 1953 Predicted by Economist

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4 (AP)—The Agriculture department's top economist told alarmed members of the Senate agriculture committee today that farm income this year is expected to skid at least 5 per cent below 1952.

The testimony was by O. V. Wells, chief of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics. He added, however, that farm prices should remain stable or even improve during the next few months but that the average still will remain below last year.

He said the end of price controls, promised by President Eisenhower, "certainly will not hurt" farm prices and probably will "strengthen them."

He testified before a committee that already is divided over what to do to stem a two-year slump in agricultural prices.

Chairman George D. Aiken (Rep., Vt.), has made it clear he agrees with Mr. Eisenhower on the need for a "thorough" study of the farm picture before drafting new farm policies and programs.

But alarmed farm state senators, led by Sen. Milton R. Young (Rep., N. Dak.), want immediate action. They are urging the administration to commit itself now to continue high price supports.

Young has introduced legislation to extend the mandatory support on six basic commodities at 90 per cent of parity beyond the present 1950 expiration date. Wells said declining farm prices stem from last year's bumper crops, a sharp decline in foreign demands for U. S. products and a "substantial change" in farm price expectations.

Model Vows Testimony in Jelke Trial

NEW YORK, Feb. 4 (AP)—Eleven married men and a bachelor were chosen today as the jury to hear the vice trial of margarine heir Minot F. (Mickey) Jelke III, and his former sweetheart promised to "tell all" for the prosecution.

All but one of the all-male jury were over 40 years of age. They were preponderantly family men with children. Both of the alternate jurors are married.

Assistant District Attorney Anthony J. Liebler was granted a recess until Friday, after the jury was completed. He said he needed the delay in order to prepare his case further.

Leading off a parade of some 11 attractive women on some of whose earnings Jelke is accused of living will be auburn-haired Pat Ward, 19, Jelke's supposedly jilted sweetheart, who originally brought the scandal crashing around the heir to $3,000,000.

He allegedly induced her to become a prostitute in what the state calls his cafe society prostitution ring.

She appeared in court briefly today in a one-piece black dress with a white collar and a camel hair's coat thrown over her shoulders. She entered the witness room but left when it became evident she would not be called to the stand today.

The model attempted to end her life last May. Jelke was reported to have refused to marry her. She subsequently went to the district attorneys' office and told a story of being placed by Jelke in a house of prostitution run by red-haired Erica Steel, alleged California madam, who also is a material witness in the case.

Defense Attorney Sam Segal attacked charged that Jelke had promised to marry Pat Ward. He said today that he would show that when she claimed to have been rejected by the 23-year-old margarine heir, she was keeping "steady company" with a well-known night club crooner.

Jelke is on trial on charges of living off the proceeds of prostitution and with compulsory prostitution. If convicted, he could be sentenced to some 140 years in prison.

Gulf Gas Wells Fire Extinguished

CHICAGO, Feb. 4 (INS)—The Pure Oil Co.'s office in Chicago said today the 10-day fire in two of its gas wells in the Gulf of Mexico south of Morgan City, La., has been extinguished.

Sea-going and land fire fighters, aided by dynamite and Army sharpshooters, combined to snuff out and control the stubborn flames, the company announced.

Company officials on the scene said rehabilitation of the wells would begin immediately. The fire began Sunday, Jan. 25.

PARIS, Feb. 4 (AP)—President Vincent Auriol's flying-ace daughter-in-law, Jacqueline, said today she soon will try to break through the sound barrier in a Frency Mystere jet fighter.

Jacqueline, holder of the world speed record for women pilots, said the test would be made in the south of France when the weather clears up.

Sandy Springs Seeks Fire Station

Sylvan High Pupil Dies After Crash

A 17-year-old Sylvan High School student who died Wednesday night of head injuries received Monday in an auto accident, was counted as Atlanta's fifth traffic fatality of the year.

Meanwhile, a 19-year-old plumber's helper was killed in an auto wreck on old U. S. 41 Highway near Oakdale Road in Cobb County, police reported.

Mary Lou Guidry, 17, of 1419 Lee St., S. W., the student, was injured Monday when the car in which she was riding collided with another car at the intersection of Azalia and Beecher Streets, S. W. The driver of Miss Guidry's car lost control after the collision and struck two parked cars and a tree, officers said.

Cobb County police said Billy McCutcheon, 19, of 137 Gilbert St., Smyrna, recently discharged from the Air Force, was killed when the driver of a car in which he was riding lost control and smashed through a service station, knocking over two gasoline pumps and pillars supporting the station.

Three others were listed as injured in the wreck: Mrs. Sue Jean Formmeyer, 19, of 2100 Mt. Paran Rd., N. W., Atlanta, the driver, body abrasions; Richard Thomas Parris, 17, of Smyrna, fractured skull and bruises, and Ralph Chastain, 18, of Smyrna.

Auto Dealer Bound Over In 4 Thefts

An Atlanta used car dealer to whom police said they traced four stolen automobiles was bound over to the Fulton County Grand Jury Wednesday under $8,000 bond.

Detectives P. H. Beasley and H. W. Reed told Municipal Court the four stolen cars were traced back to J. W. Flynn who operates a used car lot at 725 Marietta St., N. W., after Flynn sold the cars to another used car dealer. Detectives located the cars after one of the victims spotted his car on the lot of the second dealer. A check on the lot revealed three other stolen cars, all of which had been purchased from Flynn, detectives said.

Ike Withdraws Shackelford for Army Dept. Post

Special to The Constitution
WASHINGTON, Feb. 4—President Eisenhower Wednesday withdrew the nomination of Francis Shackelford of Atlanta as assistant secretary of the Army, a post to which he originally had been appointed by President Truman.

Shackelford had been given a recess appointment by Mr. Truman back in the fall for a period of service in the Defense department as counselor for the Army. The former President then sent in his nomination for the assistant secretaryship shortly before leaving office Jan. 9.

This was intended more as a gesture to the Atlanta man than anything else, as it had been expected that Mr. Eisenhower would name someone of his own choice. The Senate never had confirmed the nomination.

Brodnax Heads Industry Board

Fulton County Commission named George H. Brodnax Jr. Wednesday to succeed the late J. C. Greenfield as chairman of the Fulton County Industrial Authority.

Brodnax is vice-president and Atlanta division manager of Georgia Power Co. Also named to a post on the authority was Robert L. McDougald, construction company owner.

On request of Mayor Albert Roberts, the board voted to divide East Point into four voting precincts.

While these two general bills moved nearer passage, Sandy Springs residents asked for a Fulton County bill to authorize the county to establish and maintain a fire station in that north Fulton community.

Maurice Womack, president of the Sandy Springs Businessmen's Association, said his group is asking the Fulton delegation to pass such a measure so as to provide badly needed fire protection for an area bounded by the Chattahoochee River, the DeKalb County line and Atlanta city limits.

ALL APPROVE

The Senate finance committee gave unanimous approval to a permissive bill by Sen. G. Everett Millican that would authorize the State Office Building Authority to issue revenue certificates to finance construction of the $1,000,000 park plaza. The project would be located on Mitchell Street between Central Avenue and Washington Street. It would include underground parking facilities for about 500 automobiles.

Meanwhile, the House state of the republic committee okayed a Senate bill that would permit counties to increase their hospital tax levies from five to seven mills. Such an increase would enable the Fulton-DeKalb Hospital Authority to issue revenue certificates to finance the proposed new $22,000,000 Grady Hospital.

OPPOSITION SEEN

A general bill was introduced in the House by Rep. Ed McGarrity of Henry County that may meet opposition from the Fulton delegation. It would permit counties in which notes are recorded to collect the intangibles tax due on these accounts.

Since Fulton County now collects intangibles taxes on accounts handled by Atlanta banks which lend money and finance purchases for borrowers and buyers in many other counties, passage of the bill would reduce Fulton County's intangibles tax collections to an undetermined degree.

Other legislation affecting Atlanta introduced Wednesday included a bill by Senator Millican authorizing Fulton grand juries to continue special investigations beyond their normal terms of service.

ON THE LINE

Rep. Hamilton Lokey said he will introduce a bill to clarify the property status of eight houses located on the Atlanta-Hapeville boundary line by placing all eight in Hapeville.

Meanwhile, Fulton lawmakers have been delaying action on a bill that would prohibit East Point annexing additional territory. This bill has resulted in a deluge of protesting telegrams from East Point residents.

Cobb County lawmakers introduced bills to provide 10 per cent pay raises for the sheriff, clerk of Superior Court, ordinary, tax commissioner and chief deputies of the clerk of the court, tax commissioner and sheriff.

The DeKalb County delegation planned to introduce a bill authorizing a study of local government needs by professional experts and prepared to hold a public hearing at Decatur at 2 p. m., Thursday on a bill that would create a five-member commission to supervise county expenditures.

5 Jurors Visit Garland in Ogletree Quiz

RORSYTH, Feb. 4—Solicitor General Ben B. Garland, controversial figure in the Monroe County grand jury's investigation of a commuted death sentence, was visited in his Jackson home today by a five-member committee representing the jurors.

"I was questioned for about an hour," Garland stated tonight, "and the group was unusually nice and friendly."

Garland, whose plea to the Georgia pardon and parole board saved William Ogletree, Negro Korean war veteran, from the electric chair, said the meeting was of utmost secrecy since "it was a conference by grand jury members carrying out their duties and therefore very confidential."

However, the solicitor did divulge that the theme of the meeting was "why I (Garland) asked for Ogletree's commutation."

When Garland was asked what his reply to the jurors was, he immediately replied, "no comment."

Prior to the jury's investigation of the commutation Garland went on record as saying that Ogletree did not receive a fair trial.

Ogletree was found guilty by a Monroe County jury of a charge of the murder of William Bell, white service station operator.

Garland named only one of the jurors who visited his home, John Bittick.

'Clean City' Drive Nears Blueprint

By HERMAN HANCOCK

"One of the most important efforts in the life of Atlanta" is the annual "clean city" campaign, which will be held this year during April 13-27.

So said Councilman Wayne Blanchard and John A. White Wednesday at a meeting to formulate plans for the campaign. Blanchard is chairman of council's sanitation committee, and White heads the slum clearance committee.

Mrs. Lucille Huffman, chairman of the planning committee of the Women's Chamber of Commerce who presided at the session, said that this year "more effort will be exerted toward making individuals feel responsible in making Atlanta a cleaner city."

The "clean up, paint up, fire prevention" drive is designed to enlist every Atlantian in beautification, cleanliness and safety, she said.

Also represented at the meeting were the fire department, Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, Atlanta Paint, Varnish and Lacquer Association.

Labor Wins Round on Worker Disability

Organized labor won a first-round victory in a fight to increase employee benefits under the Workmen's Compensation Act Wednesday as the House industrial relations committee referred House Bill 240 to a subcommittee for further study at the request of a labor spokesman.

The action was taken after Charles S. Dudley, president of Associated Industries of Georgia, asked the committee to kill the bill which he labeled "an extravagant act which will seriously hurt Georgia businessmen."

Speaking for the bill Wednesday was W. D. Lanier of Augusta who urged the subcommittee study. Terming the measure still inadequate compared to laws of other states, Lanier said "it is a bill devised for those that are hurt. It is not charity."

He told committee members that organized labor "wants you to send this proposal to a subcommittee for further study in order to arrive at a fair amount of compensation to be paid injured workers."

The bill, introduced by Rep. Emory Rowland of Johnson County would extend coverage to firms employing five rather than 10 employees and would raise disability benefits from one-half of the workers average wage to two-thirds of his average wage. It also would extend the coverage under the act from 350 days to 700 and raise the maximum weekly benefits that the employer will pay during a disability from $24 to $35 weekly.

Also speaking against the bill was James Hill, representing cotton manufacturers of Georgia, and Don Channell of the State Chamber of Commerce.

Channell, explaining that Georgia now is on the threshold of "its greatest industrial development," told members the bill would seriously hinder efforts to attract new industry to the state.

Cunkle Stars For Florida

AUBURN, Ala., Feb. 4.—Florida countered an early Auburn threat with steady second-half pressure and defeated the Tigers Wednesday night, 66-62.

Forward Cunkle and guard Sonny Powell kept the Gators out front after the visitors moved ahead in the third quarter of the Southeastern Conference basketball game.

The falling Tigers suffered a fourth quarter blow when their big center, Bob Miller, fouled out. Miller, high scorer in the contest, tallied 15 of his 18 points in the first half.

Florida's Cunkle and forward Roy Roberts turned the tide in the third period.

Avondale, Clarkston Boys Roll; Tucker, Druid Hills Girls Win

DeKalb Tourney Favorites Impressive; Semifinals Start at Chamblee Tonight

By AL THOMY

Four more favorites dribbled their way into the DeKalb County high school basketball tournament semifinals with convincing Wednesday night victories at the Southern Tech gym in Chamblee.

The Avondale and Clarkston boys' teams rolled up one-sided wins to join Tucker and Chamblee in the semifinals, while the Druid Hills and Tucker girls had little trouble in entering the round of four with Clarkston and Avondale.

Avondale's boys, powered by Ronald Bradley and Billy West, turned back Tucker, 63-58, after Clarkston experienced one of its better shooting nights in history, winning 74-34. Opal Cain and Janice Young, after a poor first half, began to connect regularly in the final two periods as Tucker's girls stopped Southwest DeKalb, 35-18, and jumping Jane Harpole paced the Druid Hills girls to a 39-11 triumph over Lithonia.

Two semifinals are scheduled Thursday night at Southern Tech, the opener at 7:30 o'clock, the Clarkston and Avondale girls will tangle for the right to the finals, and the Druid Hills and Chamblee boys match baskets in the 9 o'clock contest.

The other semifinals play Friday, and the finals are slated for Saturday.

CRIP SHOTS: When Clarkston and Avondale girls play Thursday, the former will pit its spectacular Joyce Barneau, who has averaged over 30 points a game, against Avondale's Judy Richardson, another noted scorer in girls' basketball circles. It should be an interesting duel. . . . And Coach Elmer Morrow of the Druid Hills boys is expected to unveil his two stars—Donnie Plonk and Russell Jesse—for the first time in the tournament against Chamblee. . . . Plonk and Jesse didn't see a minute's action against Lithonia. . . . Chamblee features Bobby Brown, who is tournament high scorer with 27 points in one game.

High scorers for Wednesday's games were: Janice Young, with 18, and Opal Cain, with 15, led Tucker's girls over Southwest DeKalb, whose Joan Pittard counted 11 points. . . . Bobby Joe White got 18 points for the Clarkston boys, Bud Hay led Stone Mountain with 16. . . . Jane Harpole scored 18 for Druid Hills girls, Ellen Reagan 11 for Lithonia. . . . And Ronald Bradley led Avondale's boys with 18. . . . Mackey Waters hit 11 for Tucker.

It was a night for defensive work in the girls' division. . . . Tucker's Mary Lee Faden and Lithonia's Maude Johnson stole the show from the scoring forwards. . . . Druid Hills' boys go after their 17th straight victory Thursday. They are unbeaten for the season.

LADY DRIVER SARA CHRISTIAN SEES THAT SON GETS EARLY START

15-Year-Old Daughter Patricia Also Offers Advice to Five-Year-Old Speedster

ATLANTA'S LADY SPEEDSTER ATTACKS RACE MARKS AGAIN

By MERCER BAILEY

Associated Press Sports Writer

An Atlanta mother of two children, whose idea of relaxation is roaring around a race track with the footed on the floorboard, hopes to set a stock car speed record next month.

She is Mrs. Sara Christian, a trim 34-year-old brunet who claims the distinction of being the first woman to compete in a race sponsored by the National Association of Stock Car Automobile Racers.

She has her eye on the measured-mile stock car record, set at 100.38 miles per hour by Joe Littlejohn of Spartanburg, S. C. in 1950.

Mrs. Christian, who has driven against some of the best men on the stock circuit, makes her bid for the record book during Daytona Beach's Speed Week, Feb. 8-15.

She and her husband, Frank, who has been dabbling in stock car racing as a hobby since 1938, think she can better the record. She will drive a 1953 Oldsmobile.

"My mechanic says he expects to have the car ready to do 115 miles an hour with the wind," said Christian.

Mrs. Christian will make two runs from opposite directions—over the measured-mile course and the 'ines will be averaged. This is done to compensate for any wind, which would affect a one-way run.

The Christians have a 15-year-old daughter, Patricia, and a 5-year-old son, Tommy. Tommy is the official mascot for NASCAR and has his own little racer, powered by a one-cylinder motor.

Mrs. Christian first started racing in 1949 to help a friend promote a track near Atlanta. Later that year she drove in a NASCAR race at Charlotte, but motor trouble forced her to drop out. She said this race was the first time a woman had driven in a NASCAR event.

"I never won a Grand National Circuit feature," she said, "but I didn't do too badly, and I had a lot of fun. I finished sixth in a 200-mile feature at Langhorne, Pa., in '49. I was the only woman in the race against 49 men.

"I turned over in a race at Lakewood (Atlanta) in October of '49 and injured my back. Frank let me drive one more race, then grounded me."

That final race was at Reading, Pa., in 1950. Mrs. Christian won a special women's race, finished second in the feature, competing against men drivers, then won a match race among the two women and two men with the fastest qualifying times.

"After my first race, I knew I wanted more of it," she said. And what's the ambition of this speed-minded mother? A shot at the Indianapolis Speedway classic?

"No, my ambition is to raise corn on 15 acres of bottom land on one of our farms near Dahlgene. We're fixing to move up there. I want to plant, to cultivate and harvest—all by myself—corn on that bottom land."

She can do that and still drive—she plans to use a tractor.

GOLFING ROUNDUP

USGA Vote To Run Gals' Open Could Shelve National Amateur

By BERT PRATHER

For one reason or another, reports out of New York on the annual meeting of the United States Golf Association last week end were lost in the shuffle, excepting, of course, the fine stories on Bob Jones and the unveiling of his portrait in Golf House.

Checking with our friend T. R. (Dick) Garlington, who was again elected to the all-important executive committee, we find that golf's ruling body conducted quite a bit of business.

Probably one of the most important moves was to take over the Women's National Open golf championship. The 7-year-old tournament, which has been handled in the past by the Ladies Professional Golfers' Association and its able director Fred Corcoran, will be run under the direction of the USGA in the future. This year's tourney will be staged at Rochester, N. Y., with Atlanta's Louise Suggs in the role of defending champion.

Although it is pure speculation, this move by the USGA may be even more important than it would seem on the surface. Where does this leave the National Women's Amateur? It will certainly play second fiddle to the Open under the new setup and may eventually be shelved altogether. Present-day tendency of the girls to jump to the pro ranks as soon as they nail an important amateur crown has gradually eliminated the glamor from this once-proud championship.

CHIP SHOTS: Keeping abreast of the times, the USGA upped entry fee for its championships from $7 to $10. . . . Dropping behind the times, the golfing fathers passed a rule barring wearing of shorts by feminine competitors in their championships. . . . Harvie Ward and Arnold Blum will have to wait until after the USGA spring meeting at Pinehurst, N. C., before learning their Walker Cup status. . . . East Lake CC sent a check for $1,000 to Golf House Fund. . . . Garlington, a man who gets things done, is again a member of the USGA Championship and Greens Section Committees. . . . Look for an important announcement out of USGA headquarters soon on eligibility. . . . George Sargent, father of East Lake's pro Harold Sargent, will arrive in town Thursday for a week's visit with his old cronies at the Lake. . . . George served as head pro there for several years before retiring to the life of Riley at Lake Wales, Fla. . . . Claire Dorian and Dot Kirby played E. L. Wednesday. Getting their games in shape for Augusta Titleholders. . . . E. L. assistant pro Bob Sullivan back on the job after an appendectomy.

NOBODY following the nation's trap and skeet shooters more intently than Jim Robinson of Sports Afield. In the magazine, in the occasionally he treats the world February issue, with it on sunny days in the fall.

Old Ruff is not as well known as Bob White, his range is not as great, but hunters who know him well deem it a privilege to follow him into the deepest forest and the densest thicket. They call him the "King of the Game Birds."

The ruffed grouse rises like a peal of thunder. He delights in dodging behind a tree and leaving the hunter with only the echo of the flush and an itchy 2,000 gunners at the Grand American.

"Mr. Trap and Skeet" names Mrs. Clyde "Frances" King, Atlanta, as his choice to captain the 1953 All-America Women's trapshooting team. Mrs. King won the High-over-all and National Women's Championship at the Grand American. Frances led women high-average shooters last season with a mark of .967.

FEBRUARY 25 rings down the curtain not only for Bob White but for Old Ruff as well. Old Ruff? you say. I mean the ruffed grouse, and Georgia has some of these birds in its rugged mountain regions.

More than one fly fisherman out for a rainbow or a brown trout has heard this bird drumming. It's a sound that's difficult to place. It seems to come from here or there or anywhere. This drumming is a ritual with Old Ruff in the springtime, and he occasionally he treats the world February issue, with it on sunny days in the fall.

Old Ruff is not as well known as Bob White, his range is not as great, but hunters who know him well deem it a privilege to follow him into the deepest forest and the densest thicket. They call him the "King of the Game Birds."

The ruffed grouse rises like a peal of thunder. He delights in dodging behind a tree and leaving the hunter with only the echo of the flush and an itchy 2,000 gunners at the Grand American.

A good dog can help a great deal in hunting Old Ruff. A well-setter that hunts close is often the best choice.

The limit in Georgia is three birds. If you get one, you may return saying that in all wing shooting there is no greater thrill than ruffed grouse hunting.

Once you get a taste of it, you may be doomed to follow this grand bird the remainder of your life.

Principal Danger Spot At Broad and Marietta

The 347 accidents at these intersections during the last 12 months resulted in injury to 47 persons and property damage totaling $104,700, police records show. Investigating officers attributed the high accident ratio to four major causes—improper turns, disregarding or rushing traffic signals, following too closely and switching traffic lanes.

Lack of courtesy and a disregard for driving regulations also accounted for a vast majority of non-intersection accidents during the last year. Police records show 2,933 accidents resulted from the failure of drivers to yield to other machines which were moving in an orderly traffic flow; 1,335 were following so closely that they were not able to stop in time to avoid an accident; 1,328 were speeding; 1,265 were swinging from one traffic lane to another; 1,165 were on the wrong side of the street and 1,119 were driving while drinking.

At Broad and Marietta Sts. 15 drivers attempted to switch traffic lanes within a scant few feet of the busy intersection, police records show; 11 whipped around corners and knocked down pedestrians who felt safe in legal crosswalks; one pedestrian ventured out of the crosswalk and was promptly hit.

Drivers overrunning red lights accounted for 19—or almost half of the 39 crashes at Boulevard and Memorial Dr., and 17 of the 34 accidents at Peachtree and Harris Sts. Improper turns resulted in 20 of the 38 accidents at Ponce de Leon and Piedmont, and 10 of the 34 accidents at North Ave. and Spring.

Following too close caused 14 accidents at the New Marietta Highway and West Paces Ferry Rd.; 11 at Lee and Campbellton; 10 at Spring and Marietta, and six at McDaniel and Whitehall.

"It all boils down to the fact that Atlanta drivers do not know how to operate an automobile or else they don't care," Traffic Judge Frank White said. "There is nothing we can do except step up enforcement and punishment to the point where they will be forced to obey the laws."

Fish or Cut Bait, Dulles Tells West Europe Heads

that further appropriations should be made for Europe's defense.

The important thing is the North Atlantic Treaty Organization conference on April 23. It will be easier for him then to go to Congress with definite recommendations about what he thinks the United States contribution to Europe should be.

What Dulles has been able to convey to the French and the British is that a period of urgency is upon all the Western Allies. Far from the danger of war receding, the message from the American was that perhaps it had become more immediate.

In the face of this danger, according to foreign diplomats, Dulles argued, both in Paris and London, that the only hope of survival for Western Europe was a unified Europe in which Germany would have a part.

How far he overcame French fears and British reservations remains to be seen. Nevertheless, outside observers said tonight that they believed that the chances of European unity becoming a reality were greater than they were before Dulles and Stassen left the United States.

Dulles was here only a little time but he accomplished quite a lot. He arrived yesterday late in the day and spent most of today at the Foreign Office, lunching with Prime Minister Churchill and dining with Foreign Secretary Eden.

The talks at the luncheon and dinner ranged over the whole subject of British-American relations, especially in the Far East and the Middle East. Dulles explained the reasons behind the new orders to the Seventh Fleet, ending the United States-imposed neutrality on Formosa.

The British government faces a debate tomorrow with the Labor opposition, which generally opposes the new United States policy as enunciated by President Eisenhower in his State of the Union Message. No doubt Churchill and his advisers received some good advice today from Dulles and Stassen on how to meet the attacks of their critics.

Trucks Bill Said Tricky; Delay Action

After a railroad attorney branded the bill to increase truck and bus lengths "tricky" and the county commissioners' lawyer argued it would abet damage to highways, a state Senate motor vehicles committee voted unanimously Wednesday to postpone action.

T. V. (Red) Williams, attorney for the Georgia Railroad Association, called the proposal to raise the maximum length from 45 to 50 feet "the most insidious weight-increasing bill ever offered the Legislature."

Crawford Pilcher, lawyer for the Georgia Motor Trucking Association, countered that the extra five feet would reduce load shifting. He added the extra length had the endorsement of the American Association of State Highway Officers and the Federal Bureau of Public Roads.

Passage would allow truckers to carry "four more bales of cotton, five more cattle, 30 more hogs or an extra ton of produce," the truckers' representative said.

may pay for live animals though the requirement for record keeping was abolished months ago. Thus no enforcement has been possible, but none was in the cards since the falling market has pulled cattle below ceilings.

The Office of Price Stabilization said beef has dropped to about pre-Korea levels and in some cases below, with plentiful supplies in sight.

Across-the-board decontrol also is slated for veal, though OPS officials said it is the only meat now pressing against ceilings. Under usual pricing standards, the officials said, veal would not be decontrolled, but it makes up only about 5 per cent of the total meat supply and there would be no use keeping the curbs with other meats free.

On lamb, mutton and pork, removal of ceilings is necessary only at retail, since controls were taken off at other levels last fall.

In New York, sales managers for several big food chains said retail meat prices mostly are so low that decontrol is unlikely to have any major price effect immediately. They said, however, that the move would free dealers from a burden of record keeping, and permit a return to customary cutting practices. The latter effect, they said, should produce some bargains for housewives and cuts more to local liking.

Price Stabilizer Freehill said the decontrol of meat will be accompanied by the end of compulsory grading requirements on beef.

The executive order issued by Eisenhower on the DPA shift also provides that the acting director of the Office of Defense Mobilization will serve as administrator of the Economic Stabilization Agency.

000 fund for constructing new buildings at Milledgeville Hospital be eliminated, stating that the State Hospital Authority is authorized to issue revenue certificates to handle this work.

He asked abolition of $225,000 from State Ports Authority for purchasing land and constructing buildings, pointing out that the authority can issue revenue certificates for this purpose.

Here are the other items on which the Glynn County representative would reduce the "contingent" budget in order to take care of teachers:

1. Welfare maintenance of building, $750,000. Gowen said $1,000,000 from the regular budget would care for these needs.

2. Alcoholism commission, $500,000. Gowen said $200,000 is provided for the commission in the regular section. In addition, the Eugene Talmadge Memorial Hospital in Augusta will provide a ward for alcoholics.

3. Comptroller General, $75,000. Gowen said the new regular budget provides $275,000 while the department spent only $230,000 this year.

4. Forestry, $300,000. Gowen said the regular section provides $1,900,000 and the department is spending only $1,692,000 this year.

5. Health department operations, $500,000. Gowen said the regular budget provides $3,050,000, and the department is spending only $6,300,000.

6. Farm markets, $250,000. Gowen said there is a similar appropriation in the regular section.

7. Game and Fish, $300,000. Gowen said there was $800,000 in the regular section while the department is spending only $625,000 this year.

8. Parks, $350,000. Gowen said the department spent $750,000 on repairs during the current year so the parks should be in fair condition.

The committee approved an administration amendment adding $25,000 to the regular budget to finance the medical scholarship program to train rural doctors. This item would be increased to $45,000 the second fiscal year. Thrasher said it was his oversight that the item was not included in the original bill.

MARKS MONEY

At the request of Rep. Phil Campbell of Oconee County and Rep. Chappell Matthews of Clarke County, chairman of the university system committee, the appropriations committee voted unanimously to earmark an additional part of the regents' appropriations for agricultural research. This would cause the regents to spend $1,240,000 instead of $940,000 for agricultural research.

Campbell and Matthews declared the regents had been unfair to the farmers in the spending of the educational funds. Campbell said agricultural research had suffered because "there are no farmers on the board of regents."

Rep. Weldon Williams of Franklin County urged an investigation of the State Department of Education to determine whether economies could be effected. However, at the request of Chairman Lovett, Williams didn't insist on this committee naming a subcommittee.

NO OBJECTIONS

Lovett suggested that Williams make his request to the House. Lovett said he had no objections to the probe, but, being a member of the State Board of Education he was reluctant to create a subcommittee for it.

Then, Lovett added: "From my own observations, I find the department is being run all right."

Williams complained that the State Department of Education was creating jobs for defeated county school superintendents.

Whether GOP leaders have actually agreed on the proposed appointment of Gleason as attorney could not be determined immediately.

Gleason told The Constitution Wednesday night, however, he had not been contacted about the position. His only knowledge about it, he said, was that members of the bar in the Rome and Lookout Mountain Circuits where he served had "unanimously endorsed" his appointment to such a job "should there be a vacancy."

The 47-year-old Rossville lawyer was a delegate to the GOP convention that nominated Eisenhower last June. He was born and reared in Salem, N. H., moved to Georgia in 1926 and received his law degree from the University of Chattanooga two years later.

NAVY DISPUTES FIGURES

Top Brass at 4 Times War Peak, Inquiry Told

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—(AP)—There are about four times as many men in the higher officer ranks now than there were at the height of World War II when forces were two to four times bigger, witnesses told the House Armed Service Committee today. The Navy disputed the figures for that service, however.

The testimony was given in a hearing on legislation to repeal an amendment under which 5,400 senior Navy lieutenants face demotion on April 1 and 4,691 junior lieutenants are threatened with being frozen in rank.

Rep. Glenn R. Davis (R-Wis.), author of the controversial amendment, conceded there should be a revision to avoid blocking the careers of the young officers. His formula, written into an appropriation bill last year, puts a ceiling on the number of commissioned personnel the armed forces can have.

"But it would be a mistake to repeal it without other legislation," Davis told the committee. "This would be an open door to further abuse."

He said that in June this year the Navy will have about four times as many men of the rank of commander and higher than it had in June, 1945, which he said was a high point in war mobilization.

Rep. Norblad (R-Ore), a member of the committee, put in similar figures, which he said were official, for the Army and the Air Force: about four times as many top officers for a current strength of around two million as the two services had for about eight million men during the war.

"There are more colonels in the regular Air Force than first and second lieutenants combined," Norblad said. "There are five times as many lieutenant colonels as second lieutenants."

He said there is one general for about every two second lieutenants.

Vice Adm. Laurence Dubose, chief of Navy personnel, testified the snarl in the Navy came about because the service submitted figures that were "greatly in error."

He said the mistake grew out of "simultaneous mobilization and demobilization."

The admiral told the committee that actually the percentage of officers in the total force has been constant at around 10.5 per cent.

Send Flood Aid War Vet Urges

An Atlantan who served in Holland during World War II is asking that former members of his old unit—the 101st Airborne Division—gather up old clothes and blankets to aid families left homeless by recent storms and floods in The Netherlands.

Vincent Layman of 1160 St. Augustine Pl., N. E., who served as an enlisted man with the Layman said American airlines are transporting such items free of charge to the flooded countries. He added former servicemen and any others who would like to send clothes may contact him at ATwood 8096.

CAPITOL NOTEBOOK

Limit Patrol Duty, Governor Suggests

By M. L. ST. JOHN

Governor Talmadge dampened the spirits of highway safety proponents when he had the House bill a bill calling for employment of 100 additional troopers. But the governor tells us he will agree to a bill which should partially replace this dead proposal.

"I would have no objection to the Legislature passing a law limiting state troopers to highway traffic duty," the governor said. "I opposed the hiring of 100 additional troopers not because I didn't think we could use them, but because we don't have the money to pay them."

M. L. St. John

No such limitation bill has been introduced yet.

Records of the State Patrol reveal the uniformed division men spend only 39 per cent of the time in patrolling the highways. Most of their time is spent in duties other than for this function for which the patrol was created in 1938.

WOULD LIMIT DUTIES

Since the patrol is reluctant to say "no" to a sheriff requesting its aid in serving warrants, raiding stills, etc., Talmadge said orders from the Georgia legislature would be helpful in limiting the patrol to patrolling.

Some legislative critics of the patrol were not going to vote to add 100 troopers. They said they weren't going to send more men out until "the ones already there are put to patrolling the roads."

Col. George Wilson, director of public safety, contends that only a small portion of each trooper's time is spent in serving warrants and raiding stills. The trooper should spend no time in such activities, it is argued.

The bill calling for 100 additional troopers was a bit superfluous. The state already is authorized to hire more troopers than it has. The Legislature in 1951 authorized the patrol to have a strength of 350 men. Today it has only 300. It is 50 short of its present permissive strength.

WAY OPEN FOR MORE

If the General Assembly wants to add more troopers, it can do so by providing sufficient money and instructions to carry out the 1951 law.

The Georgia Legislature is acting on bills which would transform the appearances of our courthouses. The House has passed Muggsy Smith's bill which would require judges to wear robes in superior courts, thereby lending more dignity to these courtrooms. His bill also would require the display of the American flag, emphasizing patriotism. Bills permitting women to serve on the jury are in the House. If women do go to the

Talmadge Signature On 15 Bills

Governor Talmadge Wednesday signed into law 15 bills passed by the General Assembly including one abolishing the post of Atlanta city treasurer.

The Atlanta local measure also permits the erection of an overpass on Fairlie St. by a local hotel.

Among the bills were three of the governor's executive orders concerning taxes:

1. Removing state income tax on servicemen whose salaries are less than $1,500.

2. Exempting school lunches from the sales tax.

3. Suspending collection of corporation income taxes when the corporation has been denied deductions that individuals receive. The deduction to be allowed is 50 per cent of the excess of a net long-term capital gain over a net short-term capital loss.

Public records may be destroyed after four instead of seven years and Meriwether County will have two representatives in the next General Assembly under other general bills.

Local bills signed include:

H. B. 2 Bibt—Conveying the old Negro Academy of the Blind to the City of Atlanta.

Maj. Brake, Family Leave for Home

Constitution State News Service DUBLIN, Feb. 4—Maj. and Mrs. William J. Brake and their three children were to leave Ankara, Turkey, today for Istanbul to board a plane for London. They are en route to Georgia.

They will spend a month here with Mrs. Brake's parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. O. Grinstead, and Major Brake's family in Milledgeville prior to leaving for Colorado Springs, Colo., where Major Brake will begin his new assignment.

'Anti-Monopoly' Bill Rescued by Opposing Solon

Fulton Rep. Hamilton Lokey, outspoken foe of Rep. Willis Conger's "anti-monopoly bill," saved the proposal from almost certain death Wednesday.

With Conger in Bainbridge voting in the Second District congressional election, his bill to outlaw trade-restraining "combinations, contracts and acts" was running into stormy weather on the House floor.

Another opponent, Rep. William Key of Jasper, asked its return to committee—a parliamentary "death knell" for most bills.

"No," protested Lokey. "If Conger were here to defend it, I'd be the first to vote for recommitting it. Let's hold it until he returns."

So the House voted to wait to give the bill's "captain" a chance to steer it out of the storm.

3 Proposals for Exemption From Sales Tax Are Blocked

Three separate moves to ease Georgia's sales tax law were sidetracked Wednesday—one by the Georgia House of Representatives, a second by a Senate committee and the third by Governor Talmadge.

The House blocked a fuel oil exemption move by passing a proposal placing gas, electricity, oil and other fuels used for heating purposes and manufacturing processes subject to the sales tax. Other scheduled business was held up.

OPPOSE OKAY

The Senate finance committee stamped a "do-not-pass" recommendation on bills exempting farm machinery and funeral expenses from the three per cent levy.

Governor Talmadge gave "little encouragement" to a plea for transit company exemption made by a delegation which included Leland Anderson, president of the Atlanta Transit Co., and Roy Harris, representing the Augusta Coach Co.

TAX MEASURE

The House also passed three tax-strengthening proposals which would require dealers to keep sales invoices for three years for checking by the State Revenue Department; require notifying the state of any suit regarding the interpretation of the law; and require wholesalers to collect tax on items sold to peddlers, youths and other persons who do not keep records.

Rep. Jack Ray of Warren County, chairman of the House ways and means committee, said the state might lose from $10,000,000 to $15,000,000 annually if fuels were exempt.

SENATE MOVES

Meanwhile the Senate:

Professions Bill To Get Hearing

A public hearing on a House bill to prohibit cities from levying professional licenses was scheduled for 1 p. m. next Wednesday by the Senate finance committee.

Committee Chairman Everett Millican said the meeting was requested by Lawton Miller, president of the Macon Bar Association, who opposes the measure.

The Senate finance committee also referred to a subcommittee a resolution by Sen. Tom Callaway of Covington calling on Congress to call a federal tax limitation convention, and deferred action on a bill by Sen. James I. Parker of Cedartown to require coloring of gasoline sold for use in farm equipment.

Wiley Says Ike Wants Chiang To Destroy Rail Lines

By WILLIAM S. WHITE
New York Times News Service
Special to The Atlanta Constitution
WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—The Senate's Republican foreign affairs spokesman, Senator Wiley of Wisconsin, declared today that the Eisenhower administration's new Asian policy involves a hope that the Chinese Nationalists, using American-supplied aircraft, would break up Communist rail communications in mainland China.

This, Wiley told reporters as chairman of the Senate foreign relations committee, was the specific military significance of President Eisenhower's order recalling the U. S. Seventh Fleet from acting as a "shield," as the President put it, for the Communist China mainland.

Wiley's disclosure was regarded as certain to agitate the diplomatic missions here of Britain and perhaps other Allied nations. The British have been exerting all possible moral pressure on the administration to walk softly in taking the wraps off the China Nationalists on their island home of Formosa.

Wiley's explanation of Eisenhower's move came in retorting suggestions that the President had misrepresented Truman's motives in putting the Seventh Fleet into the Formosa Strait and had broken bipartisanship in the Far East theater.

On the Senate floor, Senator Humphrey (Dem., Minn.) had asserted that Eisenhower, in stating that the fleet had been used to "shield" Communist China, had given "but part of the truth."

our times written to support a point of view."

had been told in advance but not really consulted about the Eisenhower decision.

TO BECOME NUN Actress Haver June Haver Going Into Convent

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 4.—Actress June Haver plans to give up her film career and become a nun, friends and church authorities said today.

"I will neither confirm nor deny it," the blonde actress said. But her friends and Catholic church sources explained, "She is just waiting until the final details are set, and she already has started her training."

Miss Haver had to get special permission from the church, it was pointed out, since her marriage to musician Jimmy Zito ended in divorce in 1948.

ANNUL RITES
The actress later received a church annulment of her marriage to Zito because she originally married him out of the church.

After her divorce from Zito, Miss Haver made plans for the second time to marry handsome Dr. John Duzik, whom she had jilted to wed the trumpet player.

But before she and the dentist could set the date, he died following an abdominal operation.

After a year of carefully considering her decision, Miss Haver informed church authorities that she has "the clear, true call into religious service, and it has nothing to do with what happened in the past."

BRIGHT STAR
The fragile-looking dancer has been one of Hollywood's brightest stars in frothy musicals since 20th Century-Fox studio signed her 10 years ago. Her contract ends Feb. 20, and she has informed the studio she does not wish to renew it, a Fox spokesman said.

An executive of the Catholic diocese revealed Miss Haver planned to enter a convent in Kansas, probably the Sisters of Charity of Leavenworth at Atchison. There the dancer will exchange her silk stockings and glamorous finery of a cinema queen for a modified nun's habit, including a white cover for her blonde hair.

She will wear no makeup, rise at 6 a. m. every morning and never leave the convent without a female companion.

After a year as a novice, the star will take the vows of a nun and take training as a teacher or a nurse.

Novelist Williams Dies at 63

BROOKLINE, Mass., Feb. 4.—Ben Ames Williams, 63, nationally known historical novelist, collapsed and died tonight while engaged in a curling contest at the Brookline Country Club.

He evidently suffered a heart attack and died before a physician could be summoned.

A prolific writer, Williams put a tremendous amount of work into his novels.

For his "House Divided," a story of the Civil War days, he spent 20 years on research, 4½ on the actual writing.

Williams

MOST WIDELY READ

This lengthy novel, published in 1947, probably was his most widely read. It topped most best seller lists for months.

Several of the many characters are taken directly from history. One of them, Confederate Gen. Longstreet, was Williams' great uncle.

"House Divided," and several other of his historical novels were studies of American civil life during the nation's wars.

A big man — he was 6 feet tall and weighed around 235 pounds — Williams was active and forceful. He played as hard as he worked — at hunting, fishing, riding and curling, the ice game. A good curler, Williams played in several international matches.

COLLECTED REVOLVERS

Another interest was early Colt revolvers. He had one of the world's biggest and most valuable collections.

A native of Macon, Miss., Williams grew up in Jackson, Ohio, where his father ran a weekly newspaper.

Although he made Boston his home, he considered Maine his adopted state.

He leaves his wife; two sons, Ben Jr. of Boston and Roger of Portland, Maine; his mother, Mrs. Daniel W. Williams of Columbus, Ohio, and a sister, Mrs. Ran Finn, also of Columbus. Funeral services will be private.

Ike Puts Off News Sessions He Promised

By W. H. LAWRENCE
New York Times News Service
Special to The Atlanta Constitution
WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—President Eisenhower, who has promised regular no-holds-barred press conferences, obviously isn't in any hurry to start them. Inaugurated on Jan. 20, he still hasn't met the press or set any date for his first meeting with the reporters.

The interval between President Eisenhower's inauguration and first news conference already is much greater than the interval between the inauguration and the first press conferences of his last three predecessors as President.

James C. Hagerty, Mr. Eisenhower's press secretary, told newsmen today he did not know when the President would set a date for his first press conference. He announced on Jan. 21, the day after inauguration, that Mr. Eisenhower had no intention of changing the regular White House press conference, despite many rumors that some advisers were urging him to impose restrictions.

On that date, Hagerty said he hoped, of course, that the reporters would not expect any news conferences during the remainder of the first week in the White House. But all efforts since then to learn from him the date for Mr. Eisenhower's first meeting as President with the press have been fruitless.

As a candidate for the presidency, Mr. Eisenhower held very few press conferences and apparently did not enjoy them.

College Student Draft Deferment Study Planned

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—John A. Hannah, who won committee approval today to be undersecretary of defense in charge of manpower, told senators the present policy of draft deferment of college students will be reviewed.

"It worries me," he said, "that there is so much validity in the statement that the son of a well-to-do family goes to college and the son of the less well-to-do goes to Korea."

Sen. Case (R., S. D.), raised the issue of draft deferments for college work while Hannah, now president of Michigan State College, was being quizzed by the Senate armed services committee. The committee later voted unanimously for the educator.

Hoffman Leaving Ford Post

NEW YORK, Feb. 4.—Paul G. Hoffman is resigning as president of the Ford Foundation to return to the Studebaker Corporation as chairman of its Board of Directors, it was announced today.

Hoffman formerly was president of Studebaker, when he left to become first administrator of the Economic Co-Operation Administration.

It was announced that Hoffman quit the Ford Foundation because his home is in Pasadena, Cal., and the foundation is transferring its executive office from there to New York. There was no indication who would succeed him.

PUSHES VOTE BILLS
Sen. G. Everett Millican

Vote-Date Bill Passed By Senate

By ALBERT RILEY

Sen. G. Everett Millican was ready Wednesday to push for passage of a bill reducing the time required for Georgia voters to register before a general election, after successfully pushing through the Senate a bill to fix the state primary date by law.

The Senate gave unanimous approval to Millican's bill fixing the primary date on the second Wednesday in September of an election year and sent the bill to the House.

The date for the primary formerly was fixed by law but that law was amended several years ago so as to give the State Democratic Executive Committee power to set the date.

REGISTRATION BILL

As Millican's bill setting the primary date sailed through the Senate, he called up for second reading his bill to trim from six months to 45 days the time required for a voter to register before a general election. He then had the bill recommitted to the committee on privileges and elections which can either kill it or recommend its passage.

Millican told the committee soon after he introduced this bill early in the session that Georgia is the only state that requires voters to register six months before a general election.

His proposal for a 45-day time requirement may win committee approval but is likely to run into some opposition on the floor of the Senate, legislative observers indicated.

SAMPLE BALLOTS

Two other election law bills sponsored by the Atlanta senator already have passed the Senate and are in the state of the republic committee in the House. One would authorize newspapers to publish sample ballots and the other would prohibit the counting of ballots until after the polls have closed on election day.

In a Senate committee on county matters are two other Millican bills that would affect voting procedures in Fulton County. One would permit the polls to remain open until 8 p. m. in Fulton, and the other would authorize the use of voting machines in all elections.

Another important election bill before the Legislature is a proposal by Rep. Bernard Nightingale to reapportion the county unit system, giving greater apportionment to more populous counties on a population ratio basis.

This bill also is in the House state of the republic committee along with Millican's Senate-approved bills. Chairman Roy McCracken of Jefferson said Wednesday he will let these bills come up for action in the committee in a few days.

Bill To Outlaw Red Groups Given House Unit

A bill to outlaw subversive organizations in Georgia was referred to a subcommittee of the House state of the republic committee Wednesday when the committee failed to agree on differences between the original bill drawn by Rep. James H. Floyd of Chattooga and a substitute drafted by Rep. Frank Twitty of Mitchell.

Twitty said he is in favor of the principle of the bill but that the original proposal needed revision. Chairman Roy McCracken of Jefferson appointed Reps. Twitty, Lovett and Campbell on the subcommittee to agree on a perfect bill.

Rep. Chappell Matthews of Clarke warned that the original bill might conflict with FBI procedures in investigating subversives and urged that the final draft be checked with the FBI.

Ladies Do Most Buying Of Jewelry

By DOTY LUNDY

"It's no secret that women buy 85 per cent of men's jewelry as well as their clothes," says Julian Keilus, who's in the business. Mr. Keilus came to Atlanta this week to introduce new watch band models to department and jewelry stores.

"That's why we design our bands with the ladies' tastes foremost. Nine out of 10 women outfit hubby from socks to cufflinks. In watch bands they prefer yellow gold to white, six to one, for men's watches and their own."

In the masculine line, Mr. Keilus is showing a double feature band, one with a genuine leather insert on either side of the watch face, with links adjoining. Gray alligator trim is featured with white gold; black or brown with yellow. And there's a band designed for both round and square timepieces.

A treasure trove of simulated stones adorns the new women's bands—rubies, rhinestones and aqua. Resembling a dainty bracelet, this new band fits over any style timepiece.

The "looks excel, links expand" watch band can be attached by anyone—perhaps forecasting bands to blend with each outfit.

Homemakers can appreciate the stretchable band, which can be pushed up the wrist without fuss when hands plunge into water. Too, pols reveal that the expansion band is more comfortable than the stationery kind.

Catch Envious Glances With Your Fine Seams

By AGNES McCARTY

Your needle may be the best means for turning envious eyes to your ensemble.

Miss Lucille Duke, retail fashion co-ordinator for Cohna fabrics, was in Atlanta Wednesday to conduct a color clinic for women who make their own clothes.

Miss Duke said, "Women who sew are in the country's best-dressed set. They have the privilege of selecting their most becoming color, fabric, and style without sacrificing a perfect fit."

The fashion consultant pointed out that ready-made clothes must please many women, while hand-made garments are perfected for the individual.

The New York fashion co-ordinator believes there is no "bad color" for anyone. "Correct makeup and proper accessories make all colors flattering—only requisite being that the wearer feel comfortable in a color."

"Color taste is a psychological state. You receive self-confidence from some shades while others depress you."

Forecasting popular colors for the coming season, Miss Duke picked browns in shades from sand to chocolate. She believes pink and yellow will be the leading bright colors. The staples, black with white, navy and gray will make a perennial stand.

"Prints will see one of their biggest seasons in many years. Geometric patterns, floral motifs and spaced designs will be used on a very light background. They will be worn alone or combined with contrasting plain fabrics," Miss Duke noted.

DO CHILDREN REFLECT PARENTS' CHARACTER?
Children Often Retain Childhood Characteristics

MARCIA WINN

Childhood Traits Last For Life?

How much of what we are or like in childhood lives on into and through adult life?

Fifty years ago the wife of an American missionary in China began to keep a journal for her three small children, the youngest then three. Eight years later, when she had six children, the youngest again three, she stopped.

She had what she wanted—a mother's record of her children's health, height, likes, dislikes, behavior, character and intellectual development, as well as occasional comments they had made she wanted to remember.

NO CHANGE

In comparative health, height and learning ability the results were the same over the years. The healthiest child had grown into the healthiest adult. The sickliest child had died in his 30s. The brightest child had ended up magna cum laude and a college professor. The dullest child had failed to finish high school and had become a typist.

Of the 40 traits of character mentioned by the mother, 35 were analyzed then and now. Fourteen remained the same: Affection, ambition, attractiveness, brightness, conscientiousness, sympathy, bossiness, contrariness, carelessness, irritability, jealousy, nervousness, quarrelling and strong will. Six traits tended to diminish with age—quick temper, shyness, spunkiness, bravery, exactness and perseverance.

BOYS NAUGHTIER

Boys were naughtier than girls, the journal showed clearly, and punishment was merited most frequently during the second and fifth years.

Moreover, the mother noted how the naughty one reacted to punishment. Two, the two naughtiest, always attempted to mend their ways. They were the two children out of the six who made the greatest gains in later life both in character and accomplishment. The child least often punished, although she needed it most, made very little gain. As a child she was bossy, vain, jealous and unable to get along with other persons. She retains those characteristics to this day.

Fitzpatrick, Tallulah Falls, president emeritus; Mrs. Ralph Butler, Dallas, executive vice-president; Mrs. Oscar Palmour, College Park, vice-president; Mrs. Gertrude Harris, Atlanta, treasurer; and Mrs. Marie Anderson, Atlanta, executive secretary.

SHALL I WEAR THIS ONE TO THE CAMELLIA SHOW?
Mrs. H. H. Liu Asks Opinion of Her Young Son, San Teh Liu

Chinese Matron To See First Camellia Show

By YOLANDE GWIN

Just in case someone may bring up the subject, camellias grow in abundance in China, but they are never exhibited in shows.

The Chinese set much prefers chrysanthemums. This is on the word of a pretty Oriental matron, Mrs. H. H. Liu, from Shanghai, China, who attends Library School at Emory University and holds down a job at Emory's Theology School.

"We grow many varieties in our private homes," she said Thursday "but I have never known of them being exhibited. That is one reason I am looking forward to seeing the camellia show here this week end. I have never seen one."

Mrs. Liu also said that she was "very much interested" in the Oriental theme which the sponsors (Woman's Auxiliary of Eggleston Hospital) have chosen for their eighth annual show set for Saturday and Sunday at the Biltmore Hotel.

"It will be nice to see how Atlanta interprets our way of life. I am especially anxious to see the tea tables, as well as the camellias. At home, my father had many plants in our yard. He preferred the very full blossoms with white and pale pink coloring."

The Chinese matron, who has been here for three years, said that "about 300 varieties" of chrysanthemums of as many shades were displayed at the Chinese shows.

At the Atlanta show there will be hundreds of camellias of many varieties, both outdoor and underglass grown, on exhibit. Mrs. Liu will be among those who will visit the show given to benefit the Eggleston Hospital vegetable garden.

The show will be open to the public from 1 until 10 p. m. on Saturday and from 12 noon until 8 p. m. on Sunday.

Mrs. Carl Good, a well known camellia horticulturist and expert, will appear on a TV program Thursday at 5 p. m. over WAGA-TV.

Annie Lou Hardy Savannah Visitors Entertained Here

Much informal entertaining has revolved this week around a foursome of prominent Savannahs, Mr. and Mrs. Hansell Hillyer and Mr. and Mrs. Elbridge Gayle, who are guests at the Biltmore.

Mr. and Mrs. James D. Robinson Jr. entertained at cocktails, and the Granger Hansells were hosts at dinner at Mimosa Hall in their honor. Yesterday Mrs. Hillyer and Mrs. Gayle were honor guests at luncheon given by Countess Bernard de Sieyes at the Driving Club, the hostess and Mrs. Gayle, the former Countess Elizabeth de Brunere of France, having been friends since they met in Buenos Aires some years ago.

En route to Atlanta, Mrs. Hillyer addressed the Macon Art Club on the restoration of a section of Savannah built on the original site of the Trustees Garden of the Colony of Georgia which she has carried on practically single-handed since 1945.

During that time she has rebuilt and restored 21 disreputable old dwellings into a fashionable residential district, serving as her own engineer, architect and foreman and using only ordinary day labor.

Thus she has pyramided an outlay of $325,000 into an annual income of $40,000, with Savannahs clamoring to rent the 56 apartments she has embellished with wrought iron and recreated in all of their original charm.

Mrs. Hillyer, who has had her husband's enthusiastic backing in her undertaking, is now in the throes of reconstructing in miniature the Trustees Garden laid out by General Oglethorpe, with the help of the Georgia Historical Society, the Trustees Garden Club and the Park and Tree Commission of Savannah.

A QUARTET of excited teen-age belles leaves Thursday for Orange, Va., to attend the midwinter dances at Woodberry Forest. They include Martha Poer who will be the guest of Buddy Parker, Frances Robinson, the guest of Frank Wetherbee of Albany; Polly Orr, the guest of Sonny McCord, and Jane Hawkins, the guest of Elwyn Tomlinson Jr.

The girls will be guests at the home of Mrs. Joseph M. Mercer, wife of the headmaster at Woodberry Forest. They will attend a banquet and dance on Friday evening, and the varsity basketball game and dance on Saturday.

MRS. WILLIAM H. SIBLEY and Mrs. J. C. Blalock left Monday for New York, where they are guests at the Gotham. They will return on Sunday.

VISITORS at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Marvin R. McClatchey Jr. on Ridgewood Rd. are the latter's mother, Mrs. John Minor Blackford of Seattle, Wash., and her sister, Mrs. J. Newton Morris of Richmond, Wash.

The duo will leave Friday for Baltimore to visit relatives en route home. Mrs. McClatchey is the former Sally Bruce Blackford.

AFTER SPENDING the between-semester holiday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Henson, Miss Anne Henson has returned to Duke University, accompanied by her classmates, Misses Mary Ann Waldrop and Catherine Clark of Greenville, N. C., and Miss Nancy Hillman of Westport, Conn., who were her guests.

MISS ETHEL J. MCCOY, director of Camp Junaluska, arrives Thursday to attend the camp directors' meeting Feb. 5-7, and to be a guest at the Biltmore. Later Miss Talmira Carbajal, associate director of Camp Junaluska, will come to Atlanta to show the camp movies.

MRS. THOMAS SCOTT of Montgomery is the guest of her daughter, Mrs. Milton Wood, and the Rev. Mr. Wood at All Saints Episcopal rectory.

MR. AND MRS. FRANK SPRATLIN and Mr. and Mrs. Edward L. Pugh have returned from a 10-day trip to Homosassa and Miami, Fla.

MR. AND MRS. LOUIS P. BONDURANT JR. have returned from St. Simons Island, where they spent the week end.

DAILY GUIDE—Quite a number of issues will seem to come to a head now, but there is not much chance that any real decisive judgment will be made at this time. The organization of efforts to solve world problems will need time, and while some sort of plan may be discussed, a postponement is likely. Those born during the third week of October are likely to be most concerned with time and the putting off of decisions. Some tests of your ideas are probably to come now in the next few months so better go over your plans and ideas to see if they are foolproof. There is a slightly extravagant note during the evening, but the overall tone of seriousness may control that. Some people will feel that time has caught up with them and their schemes have not stood up to the test of practical considerations. Consider what you do with your time.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY, AQUARIUS! If the past year brought some changes you may feel somewhat insecure and anxious about the future. There are some more adjustments to make, I think, but you have a much better opportunity to do something about your plans during the latter half of this coming year. You can look forward to better times with people you love and a more congenial atmosphere in which to express your personality. Those far away will be helpful, or you might visit someone of some place at a distance and there gain a new outlook on life, a better mental attitude, or find there opportunity to be creative. Some romantic note can help some of you born today to cope with the changes in work or on the job which may have been keeping you upset and nervous. Keep calm and relax when possible because there are still some strains to endure this year.

Dean J. C. Ward Will Address Club

J. C. Ward, dean of Emory's undergraduate school, will address the Peachtree Creek Club at 11 a. m. Wednesday. "Why College Education?" will be Mr. Ward's topic for discussion. Mrs. Gordon Smith, 1331 W. Wesley Rd., N. W., will be hostess.

Mrs. Stanley B. Knapp will entertain the Atlanta Association of Delta Gamma at luncheon at 1 o'clock on Wednesday, Feb. 11, at her home at 3982 Club Dr., N. E.

MARY HAWORTH

Divorcee Demands Student Confine All Time to Her

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a freshman working my way through college. I met Edith last spring and dated her frequently during the spring and summer. But now that I am studying by day and working in the evenings I cannot see her often.

Edith says I am no longer interested in her. In fact, she accuses me of being unfaithful because I don't date her as frequently as I did. She won't listen when I try to explain that this is because I must work. Several of her girl friends have tried to explain the situation to her but she won't heed them either.

I am really seriously fond of Edith, and I am one of the few people who know that she is a divorcee with a young child. The problem is how to convince her that I am seriously interested in her.

W. D. DEAR W. D.: You have a two-fold problem with Edith. First there is your inordinate need to feel needed, as a build-up shot for your undernourished ego. It is this distortion in your emotional constitution that makes you prematurely responsive to her prop-seeking approach. Second, Edith is a problem person, per se. Your letter gives various glimpses of this. For example, in the fact that she is a divorcee with a child, at an age when her contemporaries are still in school. This headlong performance indicates an unstable, undisciplined temperament — with emphasis on "wanting" and indifference to orderly achievement.

To convince Edith that you are seriously interested in her, you'd have to be subservient to her jealous demands—which is to say, you'd be weaker than she. I certainly don't advise you to take any such steps. As a college student with your own way to make, you shouldn't marry for years yet. And Edith's whimpering pursuit of paradise is bound to invoke a chain reaction of unhappiness for all concerned. The antidote to her dismay is to come to full pause and develop a core of rational stability, before trying to corral a companion. M. H.

Celestine Sibley No Comment For Watson

One of the things that makes the debate over women serving on juries so endlessly interesting, not only as an issue but as an exercise in human behavior, is the agility with which some of our menfolks are arguing against it.

The first reason they advanced against women serving was bad plumbing. Now it's chivalry.

Rep. G. Stuart Watson, the gentleman from Dougherty who was quoted as saying at a committee meeting that eager heavers among the girls wanting to serve on juries are either "organizationalists or poor white trash," came in to amplify and explain his remarks.

This is the letter which he left:
"I have just read your story concerning the committee hearing on the woman's jury bill with a great deal of interest. It seems to me, however, that the over-all impression left by that story is different from that intended by my remarks.

"The woman's jury bill is a bad piece of legislation. I am strongly opposed to its passage because I firmly believe that the net result of a permissive bill will be to lower the caliber of our juries. I think that a majority of the women who will serve under such a bill are those who will not be of a type to lend strength to the jury system of trials. I do not think, as your story would tend to indicate, that all women who would volunteer for service would be undesirable.

"Some few women are spearheading this movement with well-intended zeal. I believe that they are wrong in their position but I also believe that those few, as well as most who would not choose to serve, would make excellent jurors. But I also believe that the bad will outweigh the good and that the net result will be to fill the jury box with those who seek sensation.

"My position on a mandatory bill is most clearly shown by saying to you that I oppose this bill for the same reason that I still give women my seat on a crowded bus. I think that the majority of women are still ladies and, as such, they deserve all the effort I am capable of exerting to prevent their being forcefully exposed to indecent matter which often appears in a courtroom.

"For the above reasons I am opposed to a woman's jury bill, and I hope that you will see fit to correct the erroneous impression left by your story of today."

Mr. Watson deserves to have his explanation printed without comment and, although it means cutting my tongue out and lopping off my typewriting fingers at the joints to keep from answering him, I'll do it. There is his letter. No comment.

Without knowing how important douching with ZONITE is to feminine hygiene, her health, happiness and to guard against offensive odor, it may spare her years of unhappiness in married life ahead.

Weak, ineffective homemade mixtures DO NOT and CAN NOT give the quiet, germicidal and deodorant action of ZONITE. Yet ZONITE is ABSOLUTELY SAFE—even to the most delicate tissue! In fact, no other type liquid antiseptic-germicide for the douche of all those tested is so POWERFUL YET SO HARMLESS.

The ZONITE principle—developed by a famous surgeon and scientist—completely deodorizes. It helps guard against infection and kills every germ it touches. It's not always possible to contact all the germs in the tract, but you can rely on ZONITE to immediately kill every teachable germ. Use ZONITE as needed without the slightest risk of injury. G-E ULTRA-VISION

DESIGNED FOR UHF AND VHF

More contrast, more black and white realism, more eye comfort than any TV you've ever seen anywhere at any price. G-E achieves all this with the most advanced picture tube in the world—the 21-inch G-E Aluminized Tube with cylindrical face. Used only in G-E Ultra-Vision, it mirrors light toward you, steps up contrast, increases brightness up to 100%. Add G-E's tilted, deep-tint safety glass and you get TV's widest range of picture tones with virtually no glare and reflections. And — the great G-E Stratopower chassis delivers 2½ times more pull-in power than previous sets.

↑ G-E ULTRA-VISION. 21-inch G-E Aluminized Picture Tube for maximum brightness. Whiter whites, blacker blacks than other TV. Greatest eye-ease.

↓ CONVENTIONAL TV. Non-aluminized tube. Not enough brightness for good contrast. Grayed-down picture often fades. Murky whites and blacks are hard on the eyes.

GM Researcher Offers Hope In Energy of Future Problems

By ALEX JOINER

The Railway Express Agency currently is striving to become self-sustaining, Pres. A. L. Hammell of New York said here Wednesday.

Railway Express, he pointed out is owned by 68 Class 1 railroads in the nation. It has been operating on a deficit and last year alone the railroads had to subsidize it to the tune of $70,000,000.

"We are now seeking," Hammell said, "to become self-sustaining, not only through higher rates but also through an intensive program to improve efficiency within the organization."

Using rail and air express shipments as a barometer, the New York executive said the Southeast is continuing to grow more rapidly than any other part of the country. Currently he said some 200,000 shipments a month are being handled in and out of Atlanta, about half of them by air.

The company now employs 750 people here and is operating approximately 200 trucks and other hauling vehicles.

Hammell was in Atlanta to meet with local business leaders and to introduce two of the firm's new executives at a luncheon at the Atlanta Athletic Club. They are Stanley F. Pitcher, newly appointed vice president of the Southern Department and E. M. Benson, new general manager of the Gulf Department. Hammell was accompanied to Atlanta by K. N. Merritt, vice president in charge of traffic.

Stocks Stall But Movies Stay Brisk

New York Times News Service

Special to The Atlanta Constitution
NEW YORK, Feb. 4.—Motion picture issues still were benefiting today from the discovery that a third dimension may be a remarkable commodity. Otherwise the stock market was static. Movements of the New York Stock Exchange were small, as was volume. The close was irregularly lower, with rails, motors and chemicals soft.

Sales were 1,660,000 shares, against 1,560,000 on Tuesday. Of the 1,175 issues traded, 438 fell, 425 rose and 312 closed unchanged. The New York Times' average of fifty stocks dropped 0.61 to 19.14, with rails losing 0.16 to 72.91 and industrials 1.07 to 35.37. The loss in industrials came largely from stocks selling ex-dividend.

Loew's topped the market on volume, doing 51,800 shares and gaining a point to 13. Next in line was Twentieth Century-Fox, which did 27,900 shares, gained 1/4 and closed at 16. National Theater and Warner Brothers were both higher and both in the 10 most active issues. Paramount Pictures gained 1/4 and closed at 28 1/2.

Most losses in the list were small, but Bristol Myers slashed its dividend from 40 to 25 cents and dropped 2 1/2 points, making a low for the year at 22 1/2. Allied Chemical slipped 1 1/2 points.

Depression Far Away, Bles Says

There will be no major depression during the next four years because "the American people won't put up with one," W. A. Bles, general manager of the Crosley Distributing Co., predicted here Wednesday.

Bles, in an interview at the Ansley Hotel, said there may be some "minor dislocations" in business in the months ahead but no depression because there is a socialist climate in the nation today that will not accept the fact of large numbers of persons out of work.

If unemployment does become a problem, Bles predicted the new administration will "make jobs" and President Eisenhower will sanction such legislation. Construction needs could go far to bridge the gap, he said.

An outspoken critic of the Truman administration, Bles said he was optimistic about the business outlook. Business, without government controls, can "make its own mistakes" and it is a healthy prospect, the executive stated.

Bles, vice-president of Avco Distributing Corp., Crosley parent Co., was in Atlanta to meet with local distributors.

Saigh's Tax Sentence Draws Loud Outcries

Despite general public feeling that St. Louis Cards owner Fred Saigh was given a savage sentence, Happy Chandler blandly tells Cincinnati reporters he wasn't surprised. In Boston, veteran sports writer and Dartmouth all-America Bill Cunningham previously had charged in his column that when Cunningham attacked Chandler while Happy was baseball commissioner, Boston internal revenue men moved in on him immediately.

Adding to public resentment at the 15-month sentence given Saigh is the knowledge that Boston Red Sox owner Tom Yawkey settled a $100,000 tax deficiency; the late Walter Briggs, Detroit Tigers, squared a tax deficit of over $100,000, and Cincy Reds owner Powell Crosley Jr. gained absolution by paying $34,000. If the Internal Revenue bureau now sets out after me, I'll let you know, fellow citizens.

Monte Carlo's new owner, Socrates Onassis, probably will unload his oil tankers and cargo boats at Monaco, giving him a much better tax setup. . . . Remington Rand, in London, hopeful that Gen. Douglas MacArthur will attend the coronation. He received an honorary knighthood from George VI. Household staff at Buckingham Palace will see the ceremonies; Queen Elizabeth thoughtfully installing 35 TV sets in the palace as Royal Mews. As a result of the Dec. 20 crash of the Douglas Globemaster, killing 83, the 83,000-pound air giant is being modified at Alabama's Hayes plant. . . . Washington insiders watching Ike's cabinet, most impressed by Secretary of the Treasury George M. Humphrey, Cleveland millionaire. He avoided blunders of colleagues who charged in with blasts at their departments.

Kefauver probes, when they came to N. Y., missed the Tommy Luchese and the waterfront scandals. The news called the latter to their attention, but it was sloughed off by the probes.

The late Maria Montez, last seen on movie screens in 1948, getting rave notices in "Thief of Venice." . . . Tyrone Power stops the show nightly during "John Brown's Body" when he tells of Pickett's charge at Gettysburg as seen through the eyes of Vincent Benet's creation, Union Soldier Eliyat. Linda Christian joined Tyrone, Judith Anderson and Raymond Massey at Tulsa, Okla., traveled in their bus to Dallas. It's Ty and Linda's fourth wedding anniversary. . . . Sidney J. Weinberg and Jock Whitney made a lot of all-time friends for Ike when their Citizens - for - Eisenhower Committee mailed out 16 per cent refunds to campaign contributors. Total refunds was almost $300,000!

Vince Martinez easily beat Carmine Fiore, but he certainly seemed particularly sensitive to body blows. From now on, rivals will shoot at that area. . . . Emily Williams, addressing Boston Globe's high school editors' convention, said Dickens' "Bleak House" was his favorite. He told the teenagers that pupils shouldn't read Dickens until they were at least 15, that younger kids wouldn't understand him. . . . Petition of Walter M. Jeffords, married to a niece of the late Samuel D. Riddle, to upset Riddle's will, has been answered by the trustees of the estate of the owner of Mag O' War. Trustees declared that 89-year-old Riddle was mentally alert.

L. B. Mayer's Cinemas has set off a furious pursuit by other movie companies. Sol Lesser's tri-optional process is on Chicago screens and now Zanuck's "Cinemascope" is ready for press dry runs. This one needs only one camera, with the special lens that spreads the picture across a giant screen, unlike Cinemascope's 3-camera projection that blends three different images on a huge screen. Zanuck's next 20 pictures, starting with "The Robe," will be so filmed. No changes in the theaters are necessary, no slicing of seating capacity which makes Cinemascope an awkward setup.

A Rhyme a Day

"Nels J. Johnson, age 81, applying for marriage license, tells clerk, 'Hurry up and let's get this over. I've got a date to go deer hunting.'" —News item.

If we could only learn to wait . . . and not become too nervous . . . when looking for some friend who's late . . . or waitresses to serve us . . . or trains that are much overdue . . . or planes delayed in landing . . . in time, we might acquire a new . . . and better understanding . . . of what the doctor means when he . . . makes his examination . . . looks at the tongue and taps the knee . . . and checks the respiration . . . then says, "your speedy living brings . . . about a nervous tension . . . as well as several other things . . . I haven't time to mention."

You see, he's in a hurry, too . . . although he's just advised you . . . what all this "hurry-up" will do . . . and soundly criticized you . . . he dashes off to fill a date . . . with someone who is sicker . . . or some girl who will palpitate . . . his heart a little quicker.

The man who hits three-score-and-ten . . . can live a whole lot longer . . . and all ambitious, younger men . . . will grow to be much stronger . . . if they will travel at a gait . . . that's somewhat slow and steady . . . and learn a lot of things can wait . . . until they're good and ready.

Calcium Suggested In Case of Hot Flashes

One reader reported that she had suffered from hot flashes for eight years. She wrote to a quack who conducts a newspaper health column, this column in fact, and in the pamphlet he sent her—titled "The Menopause and available on written request if you provide stamped, self-addressed envelope—there was a suggestion that calcium deficiency might account for excessive hot flashes in many instances.

So the reader began supplementing her diet with an adequate daily ration of Ca and D as instructed in the pamphlet. In a week or so her hot flashes were occurring at longer intervals and in milder degree. So she continued eating calcium and vitamin D—the vitamin being essential for assimilation and utilization of calcium in nutrition. In another week or two the hot flashes had ceased altogether.

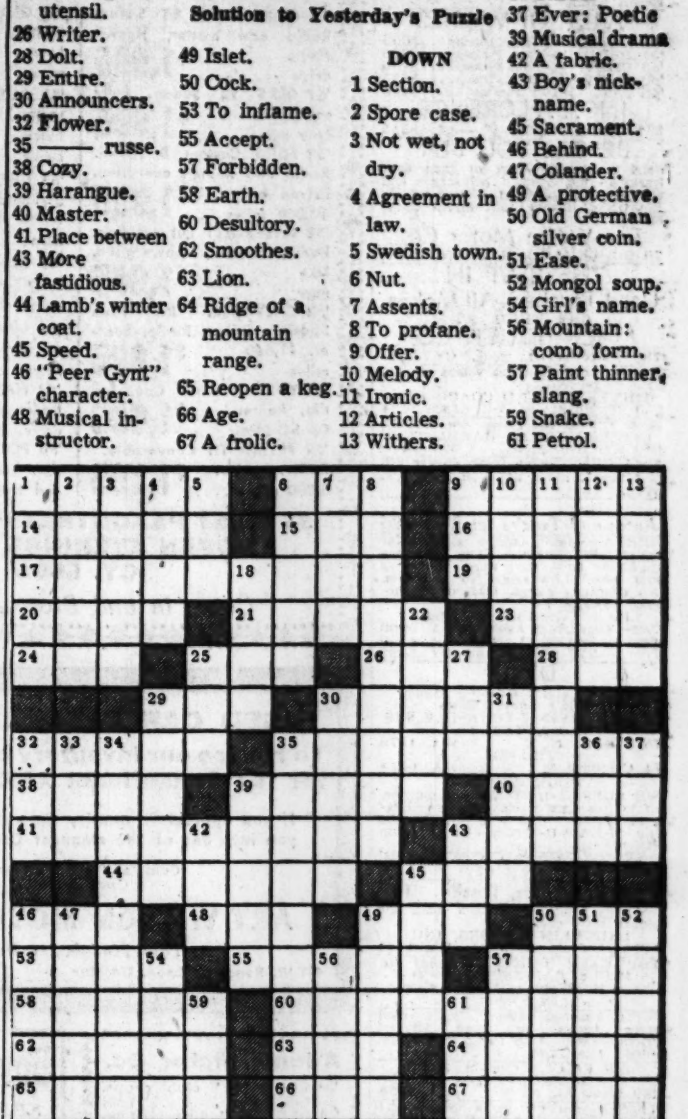

So far, so good. But then the lady made the mistake which so many readers do. Whatever I said to the contrary she disregarded and she persisted in thinking calcium and vitamin D as medicine. So, having taken it for a month or more (my suggestion that she eat it was obviously an error) and having obtained such blessed relief from the hot flashes, the lady stopped the "medicine." A few months later the hot flashes recurred, not bad as before but they are embarrassing and disturbing enough in any degree. The lady still thought Ca and D worth another trial, so she ate 'em for a week or so. There was some moderation but not complete cessation, so she quit eating Ca and D and began a quest for other remedies.

Now to the best of my knowledge it makes no difference whether one eats calcium and vitamin D in such concentrated form in the form in which calcium occurs in milk, cheese, cabbage, beans, peas, peanuts, nuts, greens and vitamin D in butter, cream, egg yolk, salmon, etc., so long as one gets an adequate daily ration every day the year around, not just for 10 days or 40 or 90 days in the year.

Of course I don't know that the subsidence and cessation of the lady's hot flashes was due to the Ca and D she ate for a month. But I have received so many reports of similar benefit from women who have eaten extra Ca and D daily for many months — and kept on eating enough to prevent recurrence of calcium and D deficiency on their ordinary refined diet, that I cannot dismiss it as just another caper for John J. Coincidence.

Anyway, please bear in mind that:

1. The calcium I recommend to women with hot flashes is food, not medicine.
2. The diet of most Americans is deficient in calcium.
3. Vitamin D promotes good assimilation and utilization of calcium.
4. Eating this extra calcium and vitamin D daily the year around can do no harm in any circumstance, although it may not be necessary to eat it in this supplementary way more than a few months if one follows a high calcium diet.
